NEW THREATS MENACE TRUCE ON UNION DUES

Ultimatum by Martin Ends Collection Drive Which Made 5,000 Idle.

MARK BALLOTS TODAY

Buick, Chevrolet Workers Take Vote on Walk-out, Charging Plants Discriminate.

(By United Press)

FLINT, Mich.—An ultimatum from President Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers Union restored labor peace to Flint today, but new strike threats threatened the truce.

Settlement of a labor dispute which paralyzed production in Fisher body plant No. 1 and on the Buick assembly line was reached at Martin's direction. He called off a union dues-collection drive which General Motors officials said prompted them to close the Fisher plant.

Buick's final assembly line was closed because of a shortage of Fisher-built bodies. More than 5,000 employes were left idle during the two-day shutdown.

Plants Resume.

Buick resumed production this morning and Fisher prepared to reopen tomorrow. Meanwhile UAW members in Buick and Chevrolet plants cast the first ballots in a strike vote. The balloting will continue until Saturday.

Union officials, who approved the strike vote, charge Buick and Chevrolet managements with discrimination and failure to abide by seniority provisions of a contract signed with the UAW after the 44-day General Motors sit-down strike last spring.

Meanwhile, strikes plagued employers at eight other Michigan industrial plants, including the Plymouth division of Chrysler corporation at Detroit.

Approximately 200 UAW members left the motor production line at the Plymouth plant in protest against treatment given a union steward.

900 Stage Walk-out.

Three of Bohn Aluminum company's eight plants in Detroit were closed when approximately 900 men walked out. Strikes also closed Michigan Steel Casting, De-

13 Thoroughbreds Perish As Blaze Hits Race Stables

MT. CLEMENS, Mich.—(INS)—Thirteen race horses were dead today, six others missing and three persons severely burned after fire destroyed the Mt. Clemens race track stables here during a thunderstorm last night.

According to police, 25 thoroughbreds, in training for opening of the Detroit racing season May 28, were in the stables when the fire broke out.

Nine trainers and jockeys sleeping nearby, fought vainly to lead the frightened, screaming animals to safety.

Owner of five of the racers, G. W. Bell was injured while trying to lead his horses through the flame filled stable.

Lyle Dowling, trainer, was burned severely about the left side and arm.

Joe Thibalt, 24, jockey for the Wilkinson stables of Detroit, was burned about the back and kicked by one of the horses. The loss, including the horses, was estimated at more than $50,000.

Press Drive To Get OK On Spending Bill

House Begins Hearing on Program; Ford to See Roosevelt Soon.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Congressional leaders and government fiscal officials united today in a determined effort to put the administration's $4,500,000,000 recovery and relief program into operation with a minimum of delay.

Three developments were outstanding:

1. The house appropriations committee, beginning hearings on relief needs, asked WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins to outline his agency's proposed activities for next year.

2. Treasury and federal reserve board executives were called together to decide how fast they should pump the $1,400,000,000 desterilized gold credit into the lendable resources of the nation's banks.

3. At Detroit, an informed person said Henry Ford would discuss business conditions with President Roosevelt April 27.

Ford, who has opposed various New Deal policies, was said to have accepted an invitation tendered through G. Hall Roosevelt, the president's brother-in-law. The automobile manufacturer will be in Washington late this week as a guest at the convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

One of Series of Talks.

In the absence of word from the White House, it was generally assumed that Ford's conference was one of a long series which Mr. Roosevelt has arranged for the next two weeks. The president told reporters the talks were designed to get the huge lending-spending program under way as quickly as possible.

Chairman Taylor (D-Colo.) of the house appropriations committee said he hoped to have an omnibus recovery bill ready for house consideration by May 1.

Shortly before Hopkins appeared before the committee, Representative Snell (R-NY), the minority floor leader, called the WPA chief the "real power behind the White House."

"His absence from the capital (during a long illness) closely coincided with the do-nothing period of the administration, when the Roosevelt depression was

GIRL INJURED

High Student's Skull Fractured as Car Overturns.

One Senior high school student was seriously injured and three other young people suffered minor injuries in an automobile accident early this morning on the Shelby-Crestline road, three miles west of Shelby.

Miss Naomi Hamblin, 16, of 180 South Diamond street, is in Shelby Memorial hospital with a fractured skull and body lacerations. Her condition was reported as serious by hospital attendants. Miss Hamblin is a member of the 11-B class at the high schol.

Frederick Sturgeon, 256 Soutn Adams street, driver of the car, Pauline Yeager, Cook road, and James Purdy, R. D. 3, Mansfield, suffered body lacerations, were treated at Shelby hospital, and released.

The accident occurred about 12:30 a. m. on a sharp curve in the road, according to Shelby police. Sturgeon reported to police that the car skidded and overturned, landing in a ditch. Police said the car was going toward Shelby when the accident happened.

Here are scenes from two strike fronts. Top shows Flint, Mich., members of the United Automobile Workers union forcibly stopping a car from entering the Fisher body plant there as the union staged a dues-collecting drive, preventing workers from entering the plant, and halting the production of automobile bodies. As a result, the Buick division at Flint was forced to shut down because no bodies were available. Lower picture shows automobiles parked in bus stop area on Columbus street. No buses or trolley cars are running, because of a strike of operators there.

PORTER DEFENDS ELECTION COSTS

Says Uncontested Primaries Boost Expense; Still Waits Meeting Call.

Richland county board of election officials today defended the county election set-up as "operated according to state requirements" after Secretary of State William J. Kennedy yesterday released figures showing that the cost per vote last year in the county was the fourth highest in the state.

Kennedy disclosed that election costs per vote in Ohio counties ranged from 41 cents to $1.71, after inviting election board members and clerks to Columbus May 23 and 24 to confer on means of reducing election expenses $250,000 in 1938. The Richland county cost was listed at $1.17 per vote.

Replying to Kennedy's statement that the number of precincts should be reduced, A. F. Porter, clerk, and Walter Underwood, deputy clerk of the Richland county board, said all county precincts had at least 350 voters, the number required by law.

Underwood said the lack of contests in primary elections and the small vote at primaries naturally boosts the cost per ballot in the county.

He pointed to the primary last

Galaxy of Champions To Seek New Relays Laurels

Erie Dash Star, Nationally Famed, Heads List of Ace Tracksters Coming Here Saturday.

Champions will be on parade Saturday when the 12th edition of the Mansfield relays is staged at Stadium field.

Not only will a number of champions return to defend the titles they won in 1937, but several state champions will also be on view for the first time in the schoolboy track and field carnival.

Heading the list of returning champions is James Callista of Erie, Pa., Strong Vincent, who was named on the national all-high school team last spring.

Callista, who is the Pennsylvania state champion in the 440-yard run, won the 100 and 220-yard sprints in the Mansfield event last spring.

Three Others Come Back.

Three other individual title-holders will be back to defend their crowns.

They are Howard Leahy of Cleveland East, who is also the state mile king; Bill Riedy of Sandusky, 880-yard run, and John Linta of Mansfield, pole vault.

All of the 1937 team relay winners will also be in the field Saturday, including Saginaw, Mich., Eastern high two-mile team, which set the only record in the carnival last year.

The field this year will also include the two boys who stole the show at the Ohio track finals in the Class B division last year.

They are John and Joe Saunders, Glendale's great brother team, who will make their first appearance in the relays. Their scoring attempts will be watched with interest.

The Saunders boys alone accounted for 23 of the 26 points

FROST DUE

Thursday to Be Colder, Says Weather Forecast.

April went into a decline today, and the forecast indicated that it might be a little more serious tonight and tomorrow.

The prediction was "light frost tonight, colder Thursday."

Meanwhile, the mercury was at a lower level today than it was yesterday, with the mercury at 58 at noon, as compared with a reading of 65 yesterday noon, although yesterday's high was 75.

Light rain fell at intervals throughout the morning.

The predicted frost, if it materializes, is not expected to be severe enough to damage budding trees nor crops.

COPPER CASE PUZZLING TO CITY OFFICIALS

Action on Status of Patrolman Held Mentally Ill by Court, Delayed.

QUIZ ARRESTING OFFICERS

Judge Seeks to Send Him to Private Institution; Talk of Naming Guardian.

What was to be done with Harry Copper, Mansfield patrolman held mentally ill yesterday by probate court, today had resolved itself into a many-sided puzzle.

Acting on the recommendation of two physicians who examined Copper at a sanity hearing yesterday at the police station, Probate Judg C. J. Anderson held the officer "mentally ill" and ordered him hospitalized for observation.

Solicitor, Judge to Confer.

Meanwhile city officials who conducted a private hearing yesterday in which they took statements from the three arresting officers, said any action regarding Copper's status on the police force would be withheld until City Solicitor Marion D. Ward had conferred with Judge Anderson.

Judge Anderson was in conference this morning with the county commissioners in an effort to arrive at "some conclusion" as to the proper hospitalization for Copper. Called from the meeting, Judge Anderson said "I can't tell you anything now for we are discussing a plan for hospitalization."

Yesterday the judge said that he would try to make arrangements to have Copper admitted to a private institution rather than send him to any of the state hospitals.

Guardian Suggested.

City officials, puzzled over what action to take in the case of the officer had instructed Ward to confer with Judge Anderson in the matter of appointing a guardian for Copper.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter said consideration of a gurdian was suggested when the solicitor informed him that no notice of either dismissal, suspension or sick leave could be served on the officer who had been declared mentally ill.

Mayor Hunter did say however that statements taken from fellow officers yesterday indicated that charges of intoxication, conduct unbecoming of an officer, and

GIVE UP HUNT

Police List Carnegie Kin as Just Another of 'Missing.'

NEW YORK—(INS)—Andrew Carnegie Whitefield, nephew of the late steel magnate, was just a "missing person" today.

He was still sought in routine fashion by Nassau county police but the drama angle was gone with the discovery that he was registered under an alias at a Garden City, L. I., hotel at the very time police and aviation authorities of several states were searching for the plane in which he took off from Roosevelt field last Friday for a short flight.

The man who occupied a $4 room in Garden City registered as Albert C. White, no doubt was Whitefield, for he left his baggage behind and in it were two $6,000 life insurance policies issued in the name of Andrew Carnegie Whitfield and several $25 government bonds which also bore the name of Whitfield's bride of less than a year.

PRICE DROP TO OFFSET BUMPER RICHLAND CROPS

Farm Agents Predicts Farmers to Get Less Money Despite Increased Production.

Aided by the weather but handicapped by the business slump, Richland county farmers face the situation of receiving less money for more crops this summer, County Agent George B. Ganyard said today.

With market prices of major farm commodities from 15 to 50 per cent less than a year ago, Ganyard predicted that the increase in production due to ideal weather will not be likely to offset the sharp drop in prices.

He said he looks for Richland county farmers to share in one of the best wheat crops in recent years in the middle west, but added that the big production will only tend to drop prices to a lower level since there was a huge hold-over from last year.

Wheat, Corn Tumble.

Chicago prices today showed wheat at 84 cents per bushel as compared with $1.35 last spring and $1.45 at the recovery peak.

Corn showed a greater decline, the price dropping from $1.27 per bushel last year to 60 cents, while hogs declined from $10.45 to $9.

Although wool is not an important commodity in Richland county, the current price range is from 19 to 20 cents per pound, about half the 1937 figures.

Prospects are for a bumper fruit crop in the county despite the ice storm and cold weather early this month, Ganyard said.

Apple, peach, pear, and plum trees are showing profuse bloom and will produce heavily unless frost damages them, the county agent predicted. Encouraged by the unseasonably warm weather in March, most of the fruit trees are blooming earlier than last year, he said.

ACTS IN HURON 'SPEED TRAP'

State Orders Justices, Constables to Appear at Meeting.

HURON—(INS)—Following the visit of seven members of the Huron Business Men's association to Columbus, two justices of the peace, two constables and an ex-constable today were notified to appear before Reed Weingardner, special assistant to Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy in Town hall tomorrow.

Although the order to appear cited only "official business," the seven men who went to Columbus complained that an alleged speed trap was operated in Huron township, and one of them, Norman Houk, manager of the Sandusky bay bridge, said activities of the constables seriously affected travel on the bridge.

SECRET BILLS RETURNED IN OHIO MURDER

Cadiz Jury Names 4 Men, One Woman in Slaying Sept. 27 of State Patrolman.

STATE HAS 'STRONG CASE'

Pittsburgh Residents Killed Officer Who Sought to Quiz Them, Prosecutor Says.

(By Associated Press)

CADIZ—Secret first degree murder indictments against five persons in the slaying of Ohio Highway Patrolman George Conn last Sept. 27 were disclosed today by Frederick Orum, Harrison county prosecutor.

The indictments charged murder and, separately, murder of a police officer, to Bernard Masulla, 24, Pete Sereno, 21, Charles Ford, 20, and Booker Johnson, 42, and Bernice Bradley, a woman. All are from Pittsburgh.

The men are in custody, but the woman is being sought. Ford and Johnson are colored.

Prosecutor Orum said that the woman's name given in the indictment was an alias.

One In Pen.

Orum issued orders for the return here of Johnson, Sereno and Ford. Masulla has been held here for two months. Sereno and Ford are in custody in the Pittsburgh workhouse and Johnson is serving a robbery sentence in Ohio penitentiary.

Conn was shot to death while on a routine assignment.

"We have a strong case," Orum said. "It was difficult to complete because of underworld complications."

The indictments were returned after a special Harrison county grand jury heard testimony from Ford last January.

Orum said that Ford testified that the five persons had stopped their car near Freeport while Masulla went into a field beside the road.

Conn came upon the four remaining in the car and began to question them as suspicious persons, the prosecutor said.

Shot From Behind.

Masulla then came up behind Conn and shot him, Sereno firing immediately afterward from the front, Ford's statement related, according to Orum.

Conn's body was exhumed April 7 and two bullets were extracted. Col. Lynn Black, highway patrol superintendent, said then that this was done to determine definitely whether two guns were used in the slaying. The tests were not made public.

The slain patrolman was found in a roadside ditch near Freeport the day after his body was riddled with bullets.

MARRIED AT 12

Officer Finds Schoolgirl Wed to Laborer, 27.

REHOBOTH BEACH, Del.—(INS)—Delaware had a child-bride problem on its hands today following the disclosure that 12-year-old Elmira Walls was married to Samuel McChesney, 27, a laborer of nearby Lewes.

The marriage was discovered by a truant officer who went to the girl's home to investigate the reason she hasn't attended her classes in the sixth grade for the past two weeks.

Rev. John Humphreys, who performed the ceremony in the parsonage of WestMinster Presbyterian church here, said the marriage license gave the girl's age as 16, but authorities claim she will not be 13 until April 30.

Steelworkers Turn Gardners, Out To Solve Food Problem With Own Crops

Empire Union Obtains Use of 53 Acres for Co-op Project.

Those ingenious Empire Sheet and Tin Plate employes who solved the winter fuel problem by a co-operative woodcutting scheme, have worked out a new one—co-operative gardening.

Aaron Davis, Empire employe and member of Delano lodge, steelworkers' union, announced today that his organization had arranged for the use of 53 acres of land near East Mansfield for gardening, and that more would be made available if necessary.

From this land, steel workers whose working hours have been reduced by the business recession will be able to supply themselves with corn and potatoes, and also with whatever garden crops they want to raise.

Here is the plan outlined by Davis. Part of the 53-acre plot will be divided into 50x50 garden plots, and any Empire worker who wants to cultivate a garden will be given one. On it he will be permitted to plant anything he wants. And, of course, it will be up to him to cultivate it. Everything he grows will be his own. Seventy-five workers have applied for garden plots already.

The remainder of the land—and if the small garden plots take up most of the 53 acres, Davis says he can obtain more land—will be planted in corn and potatoes, and these crops will be cared for co-operatively. That is, Empire employes who participate in the plan, will be required to cultivate the crops on their days off. When harvest

Levine Adds $25,000 to Reward for Return of Son, 12

DAD CONCEDES KIDNAPED BOY MIGHT BE DEAD

Posts $5,000 for Recovery of Body as All Clues to Crime Fizzle.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—Murray Levine, in despair over the disappearance of his 12-year-old son, Peter, almost two months ago, today offered a reward of $25,000 for information leading to the recovery of the boy and $5,000 for information leading to the recovery of the body It was the first time the lawyer had conceded that his son might be dead.

"Despite the co-operation of newspapers generally, radio broadcasting stations and the newsreel companies, we have received no word concerning our son, Peter Levine, since March 1. In the hope that it will stimulate further effort, I now make the following offer:

Sets 20-Day Limit.

"I will pay a reward of $25,000 for information which will lead to the recovery of our son; or, if he be dead, I will pay the sum of $5,000 for information which will lead to the recovery of his body. Such information must be furnished to me within 20 days," Levine said.

Seven persons have been arrested and charged with attempts to hoax Levine out of money for return of his son. The most recent case occurred only yesterday when federal bureau of investigation agents announced the arrest of Frank Joseph Maltese, 22, and Pasquale Parisi, 26. Maltese was bold enough to walk into Levine's office, toss a note on the lawyer's desk and demand payment of the $30,000 then and there. In return, he promised to release Peter, unharmed, on the streets of Harrison, N. Y., within six hours.

Attempts to make contact with the alleged kidnapers through clergymen intermediaries resulted in silence. Levine's repeated assurances that all doors were open to the kidnapers brought no results.

Fascists To Show Hand In Rumania Again in 2 Months

BUCHAREST, Rumania—(AP)—Rumania's nationalists, who pattern their social and political movement after fascism, may show their hand again within two months.

Their leader, Corneliu Zelea Condreanu, is in jail for six months and hundreds of his colleagues have been arrested because the government discovered a plot to capture King Carol and set up a fascist state.

Persons close to Condreanu hinted today, however, that the tiny cells of his organization—principally youth groups of ten to 20 members each—already had been given instructions about their activities during this "interim of the eclipse."

These orders, it was said, were to remain outwardly quiet for two months, while continuing secret man to man membership recruiting.

The government believed it had cleaned up the problem of the Iron Guard, original name of Condreanu's band which now calls itself the All for the Fatherland Movement.

INDICTED IN 3 KILLINGS

YOUNGSTOWN—(AP)—Three indictments charged first degree murder today against Norman Smith, 19, farm hand, who county officials said confessed killing Henry Baumeister, his wife, Mary, and father, Theodore, on a farm near here. The county grand jury concluded its brief session yesterday.

L. W. Robson, 104 East Luther place, today sent his three entries in the national contest for a safety poster to Rockefeller Center, New York. The contest ends April 29. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be one of the judges, and the winning poster will be put up on billboards on all national highways. The Mansfield man has worked out three effective designs showing the tragedies that follow careless and reckless driving.

Impie, a small white Spitz dog who gets his name from his disposition, is on the loose somewhere in Mansfield, bringing grief to four youngsters who adore him. He is the companion and pet of the four children of Patrolman Harry Copper who suffered a mental breakdown several days ago, and who were already disturbed at the absence of their father. The dog wandered away from the Copper home, 401 St. Clair avenue, sometime yesterday and had not returned today. The children, ranging in ages from 2 to 12 years, are hoping someone will see Impie and either bring him home or call them at Midway 2819.

Harry Mehock is not the only person that the Mansfield Relays has running around in circles. Ralph B. Chapman, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., is another. He is chairman of the housing committee, and it is not an easy job, either. Chapman and his committee must find sleeping accommodations for a couple of hundred athletes from out of the state for Friday night, and he still has to get more rooms before he's sure that all the visitors are going to have a place to sleep. So it goes without saying that Chapman would appreciate calls from Mansfielders who will have a room or two to spare Friday night.

Two Mansfield newsboys who went AWOL from home yesterday to attend the opening game in Cleveland are in favor of curbing the freedom of the press today. What they thought might be a little secret between them was all over the front page of two Cleveland newspapers yesterday in pictures. Tony Augustine, 68 Auburn avenue, and "Red" Bugsbee, 114 East Third street, schoolboys, decided to see the game even if they had to play hookey and hitch-hike. Which they did with great success, as witness the pictures on the front page of the Cleveland Press and the Cleveland News yesterday. In big group pictures taken at the Cleveland stadium, the two boys loom up like the proverbial sore thumb, "as plain as life."

But the two boys mentioned in the paragraph above were not the only Mansfielders who appeared in photographs of the baseball opener in Cleveland newspapers. Atty. George Blecker, James Clark of Westinghouse and Frank Mengert of the Mansfield Savings bank are also easily identified in the pre-game photos appearing on page 1 in the Plain Dealer this morning. They are shown in the 'shot' in which Manager Oscar Vitt of the Indians is seen autographing a baseball for a fan.

ITALY WON'T BE NAMED, BELIEF

White House List of Treaty Violators Not to Be Given Public, Observers Agree.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt appeared today to have discarded a plan for the United States to name formally the nations it considers to have violated treaties to which it is a signatory.

While a copy of a house resolution of Rep. Byron Scott, D. Cal., calling for such information, was being sent to the state department, Mr. Roosevelt was describing Italy as a "peaceful negotiator" of international problems.

Italy was one of three nations which, it was generally believed, the Scott resolution would cause Secretary of State Cordell Hull to name as treaty violators.

The president indirectly praised Italy for amicably settling her difficulties with Great Britain by giving this government's blessing to the recently concluded anglo-Italian treaty.

The United States, he said, "does not attempt to pass upon the political features of accords such as that recently reached between Great Britain and Italy, but this government has seen the conclusion of an agreement with sympathetic interest because it is proof of the value of peaceful negotiations."

Diplomatic observers generally agreed that the administration could not, with any degree of consistency, now name Italy a treaty violator.

COOGAN TELLS ABOUT DRINKING IN REPLY TO 'BAD BOY' CHARGES

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES—Jackie Coogan, who wants the fortune he earned as a child movie star, scoffed today at charges made by his mother, Lillian Coogan Bernstein, that he was a "bad boy."

He recounted an incident wherein he drank too much, which he said, apparently led his mother to describe him as a "bad, bad boy," but pointed out that he and his father laughed it off, and that he never took a drink since.

"While I was at school, Santa Clara university," he said, "I failed in my studies. I felt pretty bad about that, and I came home one night a little drunk. Is that such a sin? Dad didn't say anything about it that night, but the next day we got together and he scolded me.

"Afterward, he laughed about it and it was just a huge joke to him and myself. I resolved not to drink any more and a few days later went to a priest and took the pledge. I haven't had a drop since."

As the six-foot young man, who as a child of four became world-famous when he appeared with Charley Chaplin in "The Kid," made these denials, his mother filed an answer to her son's demand for an accounting of the $4,000,000 he earned in film work.

Coogan alleges that his mother and stepfather, Arthur Bernstein, refused to give him any of the fortune, most of which had been promised to him by his late father, John H. Coogan, sr., who was killed in an automobile accident in 1935. He declares he is penniless, as a result.

In answering Coogan's demand for an accounting, Mrs. Bernstein claimed that because the elder Coogan died leaving his entire estate to her, Jackie has no claim on the money.

PRINT STUDENTS

Junior Red Cross Begins Work on Identification Records.

The work of fingerprinting Senior high students for identification began today in charge of Herbert Garnes, jr., Junior Red Cross counsellor.

The printing will be done during the noon hour when Principal Jesse Beer will grant students additional time each day until the project is completed at the building.

Three students who were trained at the Bureau of Identification of the Mansfield police department will assist Garnes in fingerprinting the students. They are David Chatlain, Gloria Guest and Ruth Meisel.

John Simpson Junior also will start its fingerprinting project this week. Fingerprinting of Prospect pupils got under way yesterday.

The fingerprints are for civil identification purposes only, to be used in cases of accidents and disasters, and has no connection with the police file of criminal fingerprints, Red Cross officials pointed out.

LAWMAKER HITS MANEUVERS FOR 'PRIVATE GAIN'

Attorney Resigns Following Charges, Accusing Him of Business 'Solicitation.'

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Rep. Ralph Church, (R-Ill.), demanded today that the attorney general's office and the postoffice department prosecute Horace Russell, general counsel of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, who resigned after being accused of "soliciting" business for a former associate at the government's expense.

"Some action should be taken," Church said after charging that Russell had franked out "a million or more" letters which praised the qualifications of O. B. Taylor, former associate general counsel for the HOLC.

Russell's resignation was accepted by HOLC Chairman John H. Fahey less than an hour after Church had made his charges on the house floor yesterday afternoon.

Admits Criticism Due.

Simultaneously, Russell issued a statement denying that more than several hundred letters had been franked, but admitting that his action was "subject to serious criticism." He admitted the error of his action and apologized, saying that he had offered his resignation to "avoid embarrassing" the HOLC board.

He said that the letters were sent only to lawyers employed by the HOLC either directly or on a fee basis.

"It did not go to lawyers formerly employed by the corporation . . . or any other lawyers," he said.

He revealed that three years ago when another employe of the HOLC resigned, a similar letter was sent out but attracted no attention.

The Taylor letter was sent out by Russell. It praised Taylor's legal accomplishments and ended with a postscript giving his business address.

Church, who raised the issue in the house, attacked the action as "scandalous and disgraceful." He charged that it was in effect "using the government for private gain" and "solocitation of business."

"It appears the firm of Taylor and Russell has been established," he said. "It is certainly a violation of every rule of good government and common decency for any official to use his position to advertise the services of a member of the bar."

FAIR ENOUGH!

What Does Italy's Medal To Pendergast of Kansas City Bossdom Indicate?

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Prostitutes and professional gamblers of the underworld of Kansas City should rejoice at the news that Thomas J. Pendergast has been honored by Premier Benito Mussolini with the order of Knight of the Crown of Italy. Pendergast is a good man and especially good to the ancient profession which thrives with a minimum of molestation under the benign regulation of his police. He now becomes Sir Thomas Pendergast, and the honor, such as it is, is singularly fitting, coming from one dictator to another.

Commendatore Pendergast received the ribbon and the insignia of the order from the hands of Alessandro Savorgnan, the Italian vice consul in St. Louis, who said: —"The Italians know their friends and know how to show their gratitude." The word "vice" in Signor Savorgnan's title is merely a homonym, for it really means "assistant," but the ladies of the evening and the dealers behind the green tables of the gambling plants will be happily unaware of that. They are likely to sense an additional compliment, conceived with flattering Old World diplomatic subtlety, to the man by whose word Kansas City has remained a wide-open town.

As to whether the Italians know their friends and how to show their gratitude, Signor Savorgnan probably knows best. It must be noted, however, that as a nation Italy sometimes appears to dissemble her gratitude She was a friend of Germany in 1916, but showed her devotion by jumping on Germany from behind. Again, in 1917, she was a friend of Great Britain. As in the case of Sir Thomaso Pendergast, Italy, on that occasion, presented to various British soldiers and statesmen small tokens of her friendship dangling from pretty ribbons. But less than two years ago, by Mussolini's order, the Italian children were being taught to hate everything British in ten easy lessons.

Moreover, although Mussolini has proclaimed something akin to anschluss with the Nazis of today, it is not long since he suppressed the yodel as a subversive expression among his own captive Nazis in the Austrian Tyrol and was shooting numbers of them for attempting to achieve individual anschluss on foot over the mountain barrier. And the 250,000 surviving Tyrolean Nazis are still captives, forbidden to speak their own language or to yearn for anschluss out loud in any tongue, which is still another way that Mussolini has of showing his friendship, considering how whole-heartedly he claims to cherish the Nazis. So Sir Thomaso Pendergast may be permitted a few mental reservations in his remarks of gratitude on accepting the knighthood of the order of the crown of Italy.

Just what services he rendered to deserve this gesture it is hard to perceive from this distance. Signor Savorgnan did not say explicitly what Commendatore Pendergast did to deserve this gratitude, and it may be that Mussolini just wanted to indicate his general satisfaction over the adaptation of his ideas of government in one American community.

Naturally the members of the Kansas City underworld will construe the honor as an indirect compliment to them, and it would be a touching demonstration to the boss if they should all take to wearing small duplicates of the medal in token of their loyalty to the Missouri commendatore.

Mussolini would be nothing without his subjects, and Sir Thomaso never could have earned Il Duce's admiration without the support of his people, including the ladies in this display windows of the sin stores and the stick men at the crap tables.

Some regimental commanders, on receiving great personal honors, donate them to regimental headquarters as belonging to the humblest as well as the mightiest. It would be a touching act of humility if Sir Thomaso should turn over his order of the crown of Italy to be hung in some parlor house reeking of perfume or some gambling cellar within the protectorate of his machine.

Hollywood Speaks—

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The camera stands there with an eye that looks at and through you, and the lights blaze around you, and what you do in the next few minutes—your screen test—will determine whether you go into movies or . . . keep on working.

Would you be nervous? You bet you would. That first screen test is a nightmare, even now, to most of the people who've survived it and gone on to fame.

Fred MacMurray, just a music-maker, suffered from shaking knees at the big moment. "Just sing," they told him. Now Fred had sung, his six-feet-and-more draped over a piano, and he could still do it, despite that camera and those lights. "But walk around," they said, "give it the old zip and dash." Fred borrowed Bob Hope's hat and cane—Bob was in the same stage show—and with those as props survived

Bob Montgomery's first movie test was simple. He ate an apple Nobody in the New York studio knew what the picture "So This Is College," was about, so Bob sent out for a bit of fruit and munched it while the camera turned.

Bette Davis' first test—made in Brooklyn — began dramatically, with the little lady fainting, which wasn't in the script. When she'd dusted herself off she made the test, but didn't get the job.

"Just walk, turn, smile, act natural," Lionel Barrymore, directing a silent test, told Clark Gable, but Gable's inability to dispose of his hands made the command hopeless. The wily Lionel stopped the test, started telling stories, which led Gable to tell one—and Lionel signalled for the cameras. Gable's first test showed him spinning a yarn, not acting

Even in testing, Jimmy Cagney showed his independent spirit. Arrived in Hollywood with a contract, Cagney reported at the studio but the fellow he was supposed to see was late. Jimmy wouldn't wait, and when he came back five days later it was too late for a test. He went to work without one.

About the only test that meant anything to George Brent was the one opposite Ruth Chatterton, whom he was later to marry and divorce. Before that, for several years, Brent had been tested for almost every role that popped up, first at one studio, then at another.

Like Brent, Robert Young was a multiple-tester. Every new girl that came along had Young opposite for her test—but it was the girl's test, not Young's. He made about 150 tests all told—with newcomers and with women stars. It was doubling for Garbo in a test—for gowns—that got Karen Morley her own chance

SINGERS CLUB GIVES FIRST PERFORMANCE

Irene Beamer, Contralto, Appears as Guest Soloist With Organization: Group Makes Bow at Mansfield-Leland Hotel.

BEFORE an audience of 250 persons in the Mansfield-Leland hotel ballroom last night the Singers club made its bow as a concert group, with Edith Fletcher Jameson, its organizer, directing. The impression made by the club was that it provides an addition to cultural and fine entertainment in Mansfield music circles.

Irene Beamer, head of the Cleveland School of Music, who has appeared with several of the great symphony and philharmonic orchestras as soloist, was guest artist with the club last night. Elsie Ireland, Mansfield pianist, distinguished for her ability as an accompanist, presided at the piano.

Mrs. Jameson chose a program of music that has wide popular appeal, ranging from Brahms' lullaby to her own arrangement of "When I've Grown Too Old to Dream." Many of her numbers were of the kind to send a rustle of appreciation over the audience at the first note, as in "By the Bend of the River" and Korsakov's "Chanson Indoue" (Song of India). Among them were "Long, Long Ago," Bayly's plaintive ballad, and "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

One of the outstanding choral numbers, both because of its appeal and because it showed to advantage the training and unity of the chorus, was "Rain" by Curran, in which the solo parts were carried by Eleanor Stone Smith and Mrs. Claude Ewing.

Mrs. Beamer's two groups included the classical and the semi-classical, each number easily adaptable to her rich contralto voice. Two numbers by Handel, "Thanks Be to Thee" and "Come and Trip It," with Meyerbeer's "Ah, Mon Fils," made up her first group. The second group was in a more popular mood with Rachmaninoff's "In the Silence of the Night"; "Little Flemish Folk Song," "When I Have Sung My Songs," and "Grieve Not My Beloved." Her encores were "Shoes" and the gay "Miller and the Maid."

Mrs. Marion Ward acted as hostess last night and ushers were Judy Palmer, Louise Wolfe, Charlet Cellers, Ruth Workman, Louise Krause, Sara Catherine Wallace and Caroline Chamberlain.

The Singers club is made up of Mansfield women who sing because they like to. Many of them are prominent in music circles of the city, singing in church choirs and doing solo work. They are organized as a club and meet regularly to study choral singing.

Dancing Frock

Florence George

A black tulle frock is romantic for spring and summer dancing. Florence George, young screen player, is modeling this dress, an original by Edith Head. The skirt is full and made in layers over the slip. The bodice line is interesting, and narrow straps of tulle accentuate the decolletage. A large petaled fan of stiffened black tulle is introduced with the gown, and indicates the revival of fans.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS.

Four tables of bridge were in play yesterday at the regular meeting of the American Legion Bridge club. Mrs. W. M. Bonnell was hostess for the meeting which was held at the Legion home. The prizes were won by Mrs. L. K. Cordell and Mrs. John Bauman. The next meeting will be May 3 at the home with Mrs. Harvey Burghard.

The program included a paper, "Tributes to the Constitution," by Mrs. O. G. Place who said, "The men who drafted the American constitution were probably the greatest political statesmen the world ever produced and the constitution was the work of a small group of exceptionally competent men.

It set up a framework of government of enormous importance to Americans and the world. It is no flag-flapping boast to say that our American government is unique among great nations," she continued.

"We have been literally reared on the constitution since our forefathers first came here as adventurers to set up colonies on a new continent. From the very first settlement onward, constitutions were valued and preserved for the substantial benefits derived from them. The constitution is in the nature of a contract and that contract was made for the benefit of every man, woman and child.

"Every American should give thanks that our constitution still stands and that millions of our people will show a renewed faith in its principles," Mrs. Place concluded.

Miss Anna Proctor spoke on the "Sesqui-Centennial Celebration." She stated that the celebration was brought about by the joint resolution of congress for the purpose of educating the public more fully in regard to the true meaning and the rights of the constitution.

Older Man, Young Girl Ask Advice

By VIRGINIA LEE

I HAVE been asked for my advice on the subject of a marriage between a widower of middle age and a young girl of nearly 21. The man has two children, a boy in his teens and a younger girl.

These two are very congenial, in fact, they met while they were studying along the same line. Their tastes and interests, then, are identical. The man's children and relatives like the girl, but her mother and friends are opposed to the match although they have no fault to find with the man. The girl is of a serious type of mind and seems older than her years.

Ordinarily I would not advise such a marriage because there is a vast difference in the outlook of a middle-aged man who has been married and had children and a young and inexperienced girl. But in this particular case, I am inclined to think there is a pretty good chance for happiness. The man, by the way, thought the girl was older when he started devoting himself to her.

Make Allowances.

Each should take the other's age into consideration and resolve to make allowances. The man must remember that a girl of her age cannot be expected to have the mature judgment of a woman of 40. He must make up his mind to enjoy her youthful outlook and not grow impatient.

On her part, his views may often seem old fogyish, and she must learn to rely on his more mature judgment and not grow restless because he may seem conservative and reserved.

She will be a wise girl, too, if she can steer an even course with the children, keeping them her very good friends not "bossing" them, but helping them when she can in a big sisterly way.

It will not be an easy position for her. I have warned her in a personal letter, and probably not for him, either, but if they face facts courageously, with full knowledge of what they are up against, I see no reason why they cannot be happy together.

UNDECIDED T. A. K. Your present lack of a job and car is trying to your girl friend of course, but if she loved you in the way she should she would not talk as you say she does of her former boy friends and all they did for her. She would try to cheer you up and help you through this time.

Any girl likes to be told she is "gorgeous," so I think you could improve your technique there. Maybe it would be best not to see her for awhile and see how she will act. That would be hard on you, but it is going to be harder if you find yourself married to a selfish girl who never thinks of your welfare and happiness.

"The Authority on Authorities"

YELL YOUR LOUDEST

When you want to insist on your partner giving you a certain lead, don't whisper your signal. Shout it. Yell as loud as you can. Use the highest card you can afford, to make sure he gets the big idea.

In a team-of-four match the two teams reached 4-Spades on this deal and in both cases the diamond K was West's opening lead. One opposing team set South two tricks and at the other table only succeeded in setting the contract one trick.

At table one, East played the diamond Q on his partner's K lead. In response to this, West led the diamond 8 and East won with the

J. As West in both cases had opened with a diamond, East knew his partner held something in hearts, so his own play of the diamonds was to insure his getting into the lead to switch to that suit. He returned the heart 2 and West cashed two hearts and later the spade Q.

Where this was not the defense, South trumped the third round of diamonds and then played two rounds of trumps. A club was then led to the J and the two high clubs laid down, a heart being discarded on the last. A diamond was ruffed and a spade was then led to West who was forced to return a heart, so that South was set only one.

Natural Eyebrows Becoming

By JULIET SHELBY

(Central Press Writer on Beauty)

This season smart eyebrows have reverted to the natural. Those abbreviated pencil lines are definitely out. Even in Hollywood they are going in for the heavier line, the "swallow's wing" instead of the faint suggestion.

The trend is really a very fortunate one because most of us look a lot better with a brow that gives the eyes a setting. Of course eyebrows vary. Nature starts you off with a brow that is more or less suited to your eyes. But this does not mean that you can just relax and let your eyebrows grow like the weeds. The best behaved brows need a bit of tending.

The "swallow's wing" is so named because it is actually the shape of that bird's wing. It is a fairly sturdy brow, with a slight curve which tapers gradually as it extends outward. Whether you prefer this or your own style of modeling you can't have bushes over your eyes or even worse those straggling hairs full length or starting that are begging for a grooming. The bushes give an unfortunate masculine look to the most flowerlike face and the straggles just make you look illkempt and give your skin a dirty cast that all the washing in the world can't eradicate.

Nothing is more unromantic than a beautiful face when it breaks down above the eyes and goes astray with wandering brows. After all it's in the close-ups that our husbands or beaux get their illusions or lose them.

Plucking Advised.

This department has long thought that the best way to handle the eyebrow problem is to pluck them or have them plucked. Then you can take a look every few minutes and see how they are shaping up. If you are planning to do the job yourself, here are a few points that may make the process a lot less painful.

This pruning really should be a daily thing. If you stick to it it won't hurt nearly so much and will only take a second. It's the old story about nipping them in the bud. First apply towels that have been dipped into hot water on the areas that you are going to pluck. Get the surrounding skin warm, with the pores open. Then, after drying the skin, rub a little cream or vaseline into the brows to soften them.

Next brush your eyebrows forward, then back toward the temples, and brush them as nearly as you can into the shape you wish. Now for the plucking. Always use a tweezer that you have soaked in alcohol or some other disinfectant. This is to prevent any slight infection, in case your hand slips. Pluck the hairs one at a time, and don't get the idea that you can yank out lots of them.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I smiled at Mary's drawling imitation of Katie, but my answer was serious.

"It's a very simple deduction," I said, explaining my assertion that the detective who had been following us was neither an official one, nor even an employe of a high-class private agency. "Those two in the restaurant would never have dared to speak in the manner they did to any person possessed of any standing. Therefore he must be the representative of some distinctly lower class organization, possibly with criminal ramifications."

"Quod et demonstrandum," Mary said with a moue at me. 'But do you realize that your reasoning sort of knocks the props from under one of the nice little theories concerning that espionage which we had concocted?"

I looked at her attentively.

"I suppose you mean our premise that Philip Veritzen might be responsible for the presence of the detective following us?"

"Trot to the head of the class," Mary said flippantly, and then went on more soberly.

Wouldn't Do It.

"You know my ever-to-be-revered papa-in-law well enough," she went on mockingly, "to be sure that nevaire, nevaire would he employ anybody who wasn't at the top notch of his profession. And while I wouldn't put it past the old darling to put poison in his great-grandmother's tea, if he thought he could get away with it, yet he's too canny, too afraid of blackmail plum or fancy, to employ anybody for anything who might try to use for his own ends what he might find out snooping for papa, or who might let out of cage a little bird who would chirp to the wide world what dirty spying work papa had been pulling."

Her voice was full of the bitterness which is hers toward her father-in-law, who richly deserves her distrust of him. But it was also filled with a conviction that I shared. Yet, if not Philip Veritzen, who could be paying a detective to watch our every movement?

Mary flashed across the room and kissed my forehead.

"Smooth out the furrows of thought, Dearest," she adjured me, and I realized that I had been frowning in my absorption, a bad habit of mine.

"We'll find out sooner or later," she said. "And we're as safe as bugs in a rug, or shall be when we get our night chains on," she added, her eyes straying to the door leading to the hall, and the one which we had been told would be connected in a day or two to the suite Miss Whitlock was to occupy.

My eyes followed hers, and an exclamation of dismayed anger escaped me as I realized that the chains, which the manager had promised would be attached forthwith, were still missing from the doors.

Will Settle It.

I rose abruptly from my chair and started for the telephone in my room.

"What are you going to do?" Mary asked.

"Settle this thing, once for all," I said grimly, and Mary clapped her hands gleefully as might a child. But as I put my hand on the telephone, she spoke abruptly.

"Wait just a minute, please!"

She came into the room as she spoke and ran her fingers over a part of the paneling at the side.

"If I'm not mistaken," she said, 'this was once a door to another suite which has been closed up. But as there's no plaster or decoration over it, and it probably is the same on the other side, it could be a door again. In fact, here are hinges and everything. It is a big door, and you ought to ask for a night chain for it also, n'est ce pas?"

I rose from my seat and looked narrowly at the paneling she indicated.

'You are right, Mary," I said. 'It is a door, and I shall include it in my little speech."

I took the receiver and spoke into it far more brusquely than is my wont.

"This is Mrs. Graham," I said. "I wish to speak to Mr. Milner, the manager, at once."

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, April 21.

THIS SHOULD be a very lively and exciting day, with much commotion and unexpected developments in connection with important interests, judging by interesting planetary aspects. Unusual progress may be made, despite some very tenacious obstacles or necessary breaking up of stubborn congestions. Travel, upheaval and new contacts may attend hard work, in which the support of friends may be counted upon.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a very productive year in stabilizing the future fortunes and establishing a happy life, although hard work, excitement, commotion and sudden change may be needed. Old congested conditions, obstacles and difficulties must be disposed of before definite progress may be made. There may be much merriment and happiness in connection with romance, social or youthful activities.

A child born on this day may be extremely versatile and ingenious, with much originality and creative ability in unusual expressions. It also may have social charms and cultural tendencies, with a romantic and lovable nature.

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint.

Lamb Loaf Baked Potatoes
Stewed Tomatoes
Carrot and Cabbage Salad
Molded Rice Ring with Fruit Tea

Housewives who appreciate the tastiness and the convenience of meat loaves are as eager for new and tempting combinations as they are to come upon new cake recipes. Here's a reminder, from Inez S. Willson, home economist, that ground lamb makes an excellent meat loaf, good whether served hot or cold. Neck, shank, breast or shoulder are cuts to be used for grinding.

Today's Recipes.

LAMB LOAF — Two pounds ground lamb, one cup bread or cracker crumbs, two tablespoons grated onion, two tablespoons parsley, two tablespoons finely minced green pepper, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, poultry seasoning, one egg, slightly beaten. Combine ground lamb, crumbs, onion, parsley, green pepper, salt, pepper and poultry seasoning. Mix well. Moisten with egg and milk or meat stock and pack into a greased loaf pan or ring mold. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) until done, about one and one-half hours.

---

When putting plants in the ground spread out the roots as much as possible and keep as much soil on them as possible.

---

To wash spinach clean use warm water first. This loosens up much of the sand, then wash in cold water until free from dirt.

Feller Opposes St. Louis Today

Bowlers Share In Prize Money, But Not Heavily

Mansfield bowlers will share in the $5,000 prize melon of the Inter-City tournament, which came to a close in Alliance over the week-end, but not heavily.

Only one Mansfield team finished in the first 10 in any division.

The exception was the South Plant Hot Mills of the Empire Steel league, which cracked out a 2681 total last Saturday to gain 10th place in the Booster division.

Scores which will figure in the money in the five-men are 2776 and over, Booster division, 2601 and over; two-man, 1159 and over; individual, 601 and over.

The site of next year's tournament has not been determined but Elyria and Findlay are the leading bidders.

Tribe Gets Off on Wrong Foot as Allen Is Unable to Stop Browns.

CLEVELAND—Bob Feller was to take the mound today for the Cleveland Indians in the second game of the season's inaugural series with the St. Louis Browns, the club that figured in the young Iowan's meteoric rise to baseball fame.

The Browns presented their new manager, Gabby Street, with a 6 to 2 victory over the Tribe in yesterday's opener before 31,606 fans. The Browns laid down a four-run barrage in the fifth frame to cinch the tilt. Fireball Johnny Allen was the losing pitcher.

Once Whiffed 15.

The St. Louis club has been an important outfit to Feller in his brief diamond career. He struck out 15 Brownies less than two years ago to draw the spotlight upon him. Soon thereafter, Sept. 13, 1936, Rapid Robert whiffed 17 Philadelphia Athletics to become the American league's "strikeout king."

The Browns were Feller's opponents early last season when he injured his throwing arm, an injury that seriously impaired his 1937 record.

Big Jim Weaver was to toe the rubber for St. Louis today. Weaver, a six-foot-seven right-hander, went to the Browns from Pittsburgh on waivers.

Inability to hit in the pinches cost the Indians their first defeat of the year.

Cleveland outhit St. Louis by an 11 to 6 margin, but Buck Newsom in the box for the Browns bore down with runners on base and effectively stifled the Tribe's bids for runs.

Cleveland hit safely in every inning except the second and yet could score only in the fifth and sixth rounds.

Allen was in continual trouble. The big right-hander was nicked for one run in the first inning and the Browns assured themselves of the victory by scoring four times in the fifth. The final marker came in the eighth inning.

Scores First Run.

A walk to Earl Averill and singles by Sammy Hale and Julius Solters accounted for Cleveland's first run. The second Tribe marker came on a lusty home run into the left field stands by Hal Trosky.

Hale was at second base during the contest and accepted seven chances without an error. However, he was not called upon to make any fast, snap throws and his arm remains untested.

Amateur Sluggers Open Bids For Titles In Y Ring Tonight

By CHARLES MARTIN

BOXING talent from Mansfield and ten surrounding cities will be on display when the Junior Association of Commerce A. A. U. tournament opens at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:30 p. m. today.

Approximately 160 simon-pure leather slingers are expected to participate in the tourney running through Thursday with the finals scheduled for next Tuesday.

Youngsters from Ashland, Marion, Mt. Vernon, Sandusky, Delaware, Shelby, Crestline, Galion, Bucyrus and Fremont have filed entries.

Outstanding among the out-of-town scrappers are the McKinley brothers of Ashland, Ernie, a featherweight and Melvin, a flyweight, are the two top-notch fighters in Roger Doerr's stable of Ashland.

Both have appeared in Mansfield on amateur cards, but Ernie is more widely known than his brother. Ernie fought on the Friendly House amateur show early this year and defeated "Curley" Miller in a nip-an-tuck battle.

Miller, a protege of Jimmy Wilde, and Kid Carmel are expected to be Ernie's chief rivals for the 126-pound division crown. Carmel, of the Friendly House, has been idle during recent tournaments, but is in excellent shape for the Mansfield show.

Ernie and Miller have tangled on two occasions with the former taking a close decision both times. The Ashland boy's ring experience has proved a real asset. Ernie was eliminated this year in the Cleveland Golden Gloves tournament by one of the finalist.

Melvin may be a big threat to Paul Carbetta's march to the fly-weight championship. Carbetta, a Friendly House youngster, recently marked himself as a favorite by copping the Galion N. C. O. and Marion titles.

Eight other Ashland boys will be on the firing line when the tourney gets under way today. Mt. Vernon, Crestline, Bucyrus and Marion will also enter a number of classy fighters.

Tonight's schedule calls for 22 bouts and 66 rounds of boxing, or, in other words, enough scraps for about a five-hour program.

Firth Griffith, Bill Goetz, Joe Monrath and Fritz Kalstein will handle the bouts. The judges will be Ray Morgan, Paul Ehot, Henry Them and Jim Georgeopolus.

Kayo Morgan Wins, 'Loses'

DETROIT—(INS)—Kayo Morgan, veteran Detroit southpaw bantamweight, today held a 10-round nontitle decision over the world's bantamweight champion Sixto Escobar, but was the loser in a one-punch dressing room brawl after the bout last night.

Morgan outjabbed, outpunched and outgeneraled the swarthy Porto Rican and was awarded the unanimous decision of the two judges and Referee Slim McClelland.

It wasn't until the two had returned to their dressing rooms that Escobar landed a solid blow to Morgan's jaw.

Morgan gayly approached Escobar, "Good luck, Sixto," he said. The champion's answer was a solid right hand smash to the southpaw's jaw which sent Morgan reeling into his handler's arms.

Giles Outstanding Threat In Field Events at Relays

Newark Colored Star Expected to Be Serious Contender In Weights Here Saturday.

HENRY (Jabbo) GILES, nearing the end of a brilliant high school athletic career, will head Newark high school's track and field forces into the 12th annual renewal of the Mansfield Relays Saturday.

Giles, versatile athlete hailed as one of the outstanding performers of all time at Newark school, will attempt to capture individual honors among the field men performing in the Mansfield meeting.

Favored in Shot.

A favorite in the shot put, Giles will be gunning for first place in the discus and will be out to earn a place in the javelin throw.

Giles

Giles holds the Central Ohio league records in these three events and the Central district mark in the shot. In the district he established a standard for the shot at 49 feet, 5½ in 1936. Last year he established the league's record for the 12-pound ball by tossing it 51 feet, 3½ inches. On the same day he threw the discuss 124 feet, 8 inches for a new record and the javelin 162 feet, 11 inches which also was good for a new standard.

Last year in the Relays Giles placed second in the shot put. He was disqualified in the discus and was not entered in the javelin.

The six-foot, 210-pound colored youth is winding up a career at Newark high that embraces three sports, football, basket ball and track. By the time the current track season closes he will have won three letters in each sport except basket ball. He was the varsity center in basketball in 1937 and 1938, playing a large part in winning the state title for Newark this past season.

Giles' lettrewinning, eight of them, is the most garnered by a Newark athlete in the past decade.

Myers in Field.

Giles will be Newark's lone representative in the field events. On the cinders Newark's colors will be carried by Freddy Myers, senior miler and member of the state championship cage team, along with a two-mile and junior high relay team.

Myers finished fourth in the mile run at the Relays last year after pacing the field the first two laps. He was undefeated in Newark's other meets last year and two weeks ago placed first in his specialty in a dual meet with Mansfield.

RUPTURE
SHIELD EXPERT HERE

H. M. SHEVNAN, widely known expert of Chicago, will personally be at the Southern Hotel, Mansfield, Saturday, only, April 23, from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Mr. Shevnan says: The Zoetic Shield is a tremendous improvement over all former methods, effecting immediate results. It will not only hold the rupture perfectly but increase the circulation, strengthens the weakened parts, usually closes the opening in four days on the average case, regardless of heavy lifting, straining or any position the body may assume no matter the size or location. A nationally known scientific method. No under straps or cumbersome arrangements and absolutely no medicines or medical treatments.

Mr. Shevnan will be glad to demonstrate without charge.

Relays Title May Be Carted Over State Border Saturday

Out-of-State Schools Promise to Offer Trouble at Stadium Saturday.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

THE championship of the Mansfield Relays is in danger of being carted out of the state Saturday when the 12th edition of the schoolboy track and field circus is staged at Stadium field.

Ohio will again be represented by a host of swift and powerful teams, but the out-of-state entrants are also expected to be considerable stronger than in the past.

Last year marked the first time that any team from outside of the Ohio border made any showing in the Relays, and with more schools and bigger squads representing the invaders Saturday, the state schools may be forced to relinquish the title they have kept on home soil since the inception of the affair.

Strong Vincent Back.

Erie, Pa., Strong Vincent, which finished in a tie for third place in 1937, will return Saturday with a team that should again threaten the supremacy of the Ohio schools.

Other returning out-of-state schools which garnered points last year are Erie, Pa., East, River Rouge, Mich., Canonsburg, Pa., and Saginaw, Mich., Eastern.

These schools will be augmented by a number of other out-of-state teams which have gained enviable reputations in the thin-clad sport in their states.

One of the invaders which will bear watching is Nott Terrace of Schenectady, N. Y., which has been a dominating school in the track sport in the Empire state for many years.

Nott Terrace has won so many championships that the natives of Schenectady can hardly remember the last time it failed to win at least one title a year.

Reports preceding the invasion of Newport, Ky., indicate that it will be a factor.

Huntington, W. Va., was represented by a small squad at the Relays last year, but returns Saturday with a full team that is likely to figure in the race for points.

Only River Rouge of Michigan will send a good-sized squad, but the other schools will bring a number of specialists to the city that should threaten existing records.

Saginaw, Eastern, which set the only new record in the Relays last year, should count points with its crack two-mile team, but may not figure high in the scoring.

Sends Big Squad.

Erie East will send the largest delegation of athletes from an out-of-state school. It has entered 41 competitors, and, naturally, enhances its chances to score heavily in the meet.

As graduation has hit most of the track powers in Ohio rather hard, it is difficult to name the schools which are most likely to figure prominently in the defense of the title against the invaders.

However, Cleveland Central, which has entered 41 men in the competition; Collinwood, Rhodes, Lincoln, East Tech, West Tech and East; Toledo Scott, Maple Heights and Dayton Roosevelt rank well up in the list of stronger teams.

Mansfield, which has won more Relays championship than other teams, may fail in its attempt to regain the title, but the Red Streaks should again accumulate more than an ordinary number of points.

80 Schools Now Entered In Relays

The entry list for the 12th annual Mansfield Relays to be staged Saturday soared to 80 schools today to pull away from the old record of 71 set in 1932.

Adding the junior high schools entered in a special relay event the entry is well over the 100-team mark.

Schools which filed entries today were Tridelphia high of Wheeling W. Va. Cleveland Cathedral Latin Warren Harding Shaker Heights and Tiffin Columbian.

Banner Crowds See Inaugural Games

By GAYLE TALBOT, Associated Press Sports Writer.

BALL-THROWING presidents, governors and mayors were back at their appointed tasks today after playing star roles in the opening day frills and folderols that started off another major league baseball campaign.

Fans totalling just over 200,000 witnessed yesterday's nine flag-spangled games, marking the general opening of the season after Monday previews at Boston and Washington. This turnout included a banner crowd of 40,000 at the Polo Grounds in New York; 34,000 at Cincinnati and 33,000 for the afternoon half of the Patriot's day program between the New York Yankees and the Red Sox at Boston.

Yanks Fail to Hit.

Two outstanding events pointed the gala occasion and has baseball bugs talking today—the rip-roaring batting attack unveiled by Bill Terry's New York Giants in flattening the Boston Bees, 13 to 1, and the continued weak hitting of the world champion Yankees, who collected a total of only seven hits in splitting with the Red Sox.

It was all very disconcerting. The Giants, picked to fight for the National league pennant with Chicago because of their pitching and tight defense, spilled 16 hits off three Boston pitchers, including three home runs, while Cliff Melton easily held the Bees.

On the other hand, the Yankees continued to look hamstrung with Joe DiMaggio out of their line-up. They won the morning game from Boston, 5 to 3, on a pinch-hit by Red Ruffing in the last inning, but made only five hits. In the afternoon Jack Wilson and Fritz Ostermueller blanked them 6 to 0, allowing the two-time champions only two safeties.

About the only consolation for Yankees followers was the fact that the two clubs supposed to give them their competition, Detroit and Cleveland, also had headaches today. Detroit dropped a tight one to the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 3, and the lowly St. Louis Browns spoiled Oscar Vitt's managerial debut at Cleveland by shellacking Johnny Allen, 6 to 2.

Roxie Lawson was the losing Detroit pitcher, the Sox jumping on him for three runs in the fourth inning. Vernon Kennedy was slated to pitch against his former White Sox mates today.

In the other American league game, the Washington Senators made it two straight over Philadelphia's Athletics, 9 to 2, as Monte Weaver hurled six-hit ball.

The Chicago Cubs, with their new $250,000 beauty, Dizzy Dean, lending encouragement, came through with a hard-earned 8 to 7 win over Cincinnati to keep pace with the Giants. Rip Collins, Cub first baseman, belted four of his team's 15 hits off three Cincinnati pitchers.

Dean on Hill Today.

Owner Phil Wrigley of the Cubs was scheduled to learn how much pitcher he got for all that money today when Dean was Manager Charley Grimm's choice against Cincinnati's Lee Grissom.

The Cardinals started off in that second division to which Bill Terry has assigned them by dropping their opener to Pittsburgh, 4 to 3. Arky Vaughn's homerun with one on in the ninth did the dirty work.

The revived Brooklyns made Larry MacPhail look good temporarily, at least, by walloping Philadelphia, 12 to 5. Dolf Camilli hit one of the Dodgers' three home-runs against his former comrades.

SHILOH HIGH WINS BASEBALL INAUGURAL

SHILOH—The Shiloh high baseball club defeated New Haven, 7 to 1, here yesterday in the opening Twin-Valley league game. Jay Mosher and Dawson divided the pitching duties for the winners and set the invaders down with five hits. Daup cracked out a triple and two singles in four trips to the plate to lead the Shiloh attack.

STOCK LOSSES EXTENDED BY GENERAL LIST

Market Continues to Yield Gains as Inflationary Sentiment Wanes.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A slow decline cancelled today more of the ground the stock market won on last week's broad upturns.

Aircraft shares overcame the main down currents and picked up moderate gains. They were favored by relatively good first quarter earnings, as indicated in samplings for the period.

Bonds were mixed and quiet. Major commodities moved narrowly.

Waning of the first burst of inflationary sentiment revived by the new spending-lending proposals in Washington was apparent in the yielding of much of last week's gains by metal, rubber, farm machinery, electric equipment and other industrial shares.

Business indicators offered little prospect of immediate change in the recent sidewise movement of production.

"Iron Age" said the steel industry's "nearby tendency is more likely to be down than up in view of the greatly restricted demand from major consumers."

The Edison Electric Institute reported power output last week was 9.9 per cent lower than in the comparable 1937 period.

With yesterday's episode, the story of "Dixie Dugan" came to a close on The News-Journal comic page.

"Dixie" and her friends have been members of The News-Journal comic page family for years, and it is with regret that we see the story come to a close.

On Friday, April 22, a new comic will appear in this space, one that we are sure will quickly be as popular with readers of The News-Journal as "Dixie" has been.

The new strip will be "L'il Abner," who will be found reading his invitation to Mansfield on the first page of the second section of today's paper.

On Thursday, in this space, we will familiarize you with the story of "L'il Abner" to date. Then on Friday, it will appear on the comic page.

On Friday, "L'il Abner" will make his official debut.

Thus, we bid farewell to "Dixie Dugan" and extend a welcome to "L'il Abner."

Answer to previous puzzle:

RADIO BROADCASTERS SELECT 'CZAR' TO IRON OUT TROUBLES

WASHINGTON—(INS)—A benevolent "czar" has been chosen the country's radio broadcasters.

He is Mark Ethridge, vice-president and general manager of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal and Times, who was elected by the National Association of Broadcasters in session here.

Ethridge's exact title is president of the association which he will serve without pay and only until a permanent president is selected later.

Broadcasters shied from the word "czar" but Ethridge will act in virtually the same capacity as Will Hays of the motion picture industry and Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis over the baseball industry.

It was made clear, however, that Ethridge will not exercise the complete authority given Hays and Judge Landis, but rather will act as a super-arbiter and spokesman to represent broadcasters in public affairs as well as to smooth out internal difficulties.

Ethridge will set up headquarters for the association here and put together the structure which will knit broadcasters into a unit of "common good."

If other people never made mistakes we would have but little cause to pride ourselves on our abilities.

FACE PUZZLE IN COPPER CASE

City Officials Delay Action on Status of Officer Held Mentally Ill.

shooting with intent to kill could be preferred against him.

The statements showed, the mayor said, that Copper was brought to the police station after being disarmed by fellow officers following the Easter day shooting in which the patrolman threatened the life of his wife and four children, with his service revolver.

Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert added he had asked Police Chief Meade K. Bates yesterday for a written recommendation concerning Copper's status, but at noon today had not yet received the report.

Styert said that it was brought out in the hearing yesterday that three officers, including Copper, were now on the sick list, Patrolman Russell Miles being confined to his home with a nervous breakdown while Capt. John Miller, second shift officer, also was under a physician's care.

Styert said police officers were allowed 90 days sick leave per year with pay but that no additional men could be added to the force because of the cramped city finances.

OK'S $422,000 IN COUNTY JOBS

PWA Places Richland Projects on Approved List Pending Recovery Fund's OK.

PWA projects calling for expenditure of $422,000 could be started in Richland and nearby counties if congress appropriates the funds asked by President Roosevelt in his recovery recommendations, the Associated Press quoted Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes as saying in Washington today.

Ickes emphasized that no allocations had been made on the projects, but said they had been approved by PWA. If congress appropriates the necessary funds, presidential approval will still be needed, and local sponsors must show that they are still willing to advance their share of the undertakings, which amounts in most cases to 45 per cent, Ickes said.

He estimated the total value of Ohio projects falling in this category at $31,000,000.

In this territory is a Lucas school addition, estimated to cost $86,000, an addition to Ashland high school, estimated to cost $100,000, one school in Galion, $98,000, one in Knox county, estimated to cost $66,000 and two in Morrow, to cost $72,000.

ACT SWIFTLY ON RECOVERY PLAN

Congress Leaders, Roosevelt Aids Speed Hearings on Spending Program.

deepening," Snell said in a statement.

"His return marked the beginning of the era of feverish activity on the part of the New Deal. Since 'spending Harry' came back to town things have been moving."

The gold conference between Secretary Morgenthau and the government bond experts of the federal reserve board was private, and no announcement was expected before evening.

Although the gold was desterilized last week by presidential order, the credit potentialities of the fund will not be effective until the treasury spends the money. The money can be spent rapidly by redeeming government securities, or more slowly by using it to help pay for governmental expenditures.

A combination of the two methods appeared probable.

Neither method will have much effect on the eventual federal debt because President Roosevelt has estimated that the deficit in the fiscal year beginning July 1 will exceed the gold fund by about $1,500,000,000, necessitating a minimum of that much borrowing.

Thus, the more the treasury reduces its debt now, the more it will have to borrow next year.

The banks already have about $2,500,000,000 they can lend, including $750,000,000 freed by a reduction of reserve requirements last week.

Wholehearted support for the general recovery program was expressed by Representative Boileau (Pro.-Wis.) who declared he believed that "other liberal members of the house feel as I do about it."

"The administration shows signs of delaying PWA, housing and other building projects," Boileau said, "I would be inclined to offer an amendment to raise the relief appropriation from $1,250,000,000 to $2,000,000,000."

Bad breath is death to romance. And bad breath is frequently caused by constipation. Just as headaches, sleeplessness, weakness can be produced by it, or most skin blemishes aggravated by it!

Dr. F. M. Edwards, during his years of practice, treated hundreds of women for constipation and frequently noted that relief sweetened the breath and improved well-being and vitality. For his treatment he used a purely vegetable compound—Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This laxative is gentle, yet peculiarly effective because it increases the bile flow without shocking the intestinal system.

Empire Union Obtains Use of 53 Acres for Co-operative Gardening Project.

time comes around, the potatoes and corn will be divided on a share basis among the men who helped to raise them. Davis said he expects to have at least 35 acres planted in potatoes and corn.

"I think this garden project will be as successful as the wood-cutting undertaking was," Davis says. "We started out with 12 men in wood-cutting crews, and wound up with 150 working. We cut more than 1,600 cords of wood from land on the Millsborough and Olivesburg roads. The men divided the wood according to the amount of work they did."

And—ask any of them—when work's scarce and it's hard to find room in the budget to buy coal, cord wood comes in mighty handy, especially when the only cost is the labor required to cut it.

The garden project, according to Davis, has been made possible through the generosity of property owners and Mansfield farm equipment dealers.

Use of the land in East Mansfield has been donated by the owners, Mrs Mary Viers, Wooster road, Don Bookwalter, Ashland road, and A. E. Lantz, Mifflin township.

Ground will be plowed tomorrow with the latest farm equipment. The Farm Bureau, Sears-Roebuck, and the G. L. Rogers company will each send a tractor to plow the acreage, and then the workers will take over.

U. S. Mediators Act In Street Car Strike.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Two federal mediators were to meet again today with representatives of the Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric company and the street car men's union in an effort to settle the city's four-day transportation strike.

After conferring secretly for four hours Tuesday afternoon and evening in the office of Ben W. Marr, company president, the union committee and company officials recessed until 11 a. m. today without reaching an agreement.

Judge John L. Conner and Hugh Friel, U. S. labor department conciliators, said they had assurance that the company would not attempt to operate street cars while mediation meetings are in progress. Earlier, Marr had requested police protection to restore transportation.

The union committee indicated at the beginning of yesterday's conferences that it was willing to compromise on its demands for 10 to 13 cents hourly wage increases and a closed shop.

Conner would not discuss the meetings other than to say that progress has been made and that "we are very hopeful."

Picketing of the car barns continued today but no demonstrations were reported.

150 Retailers Expected to Meet With Liquor Board.

Upwards of 75 liquor and beer retailers of Richland and nearby counties have made reservations for a diner Tuesday, April 26, at which members of the state liquor control board will discuss with them problems of enforcement and retailing.

Earl C. Pollock, chairman of the committee on arrangements, said reservations must be made before Saturday. He predicted that well over 150 retailers will attend, together with a number of distributors.

Purpose of the session, Pollock said, is to discuss means of purging the liquor and beer business of those persons whose conduct in his or her place of business is likely to prove detrimental to the business as a whole.

All law enforcement officers, Mayor C. M. Hunter, Judges C. H. Huston, C. J. Anderson, and G. E. Kalbfleisch of Richland county courts, members of the liquor control board and state and district liquor enforcement officers have endorsed the meeting and will attend, Pollock said.

CHAPTER XVII

Gay's wrist moved, and the beam went sliding up over Sylvia's shoulder to Sylvia's face. There was a black cloak over the shoulder. It had fallen away to leave the arm white and bare. She wished there had been something to cover Sylvia's face. It was quite white, quite terrified. It had a drowned look.

Gay said, "What is it?" but the words didn't make and sound. It was the most horrible thing that had ever happened to her, because she had said the words, and she had said them again, and she tried to say "Oh, Sylvia!" but there wasn't any sound at all. There hadn't been any sound since the shot and Sylvia's scream and her own heart beating hard.

Her hand wavered, and the beam came slanting down. She saw Sylvia open her hand and let the pistol fall, she heard it fall, and she heard the sound of someone running, and she heard Sylvia take a long deep, sobbing breath.

She ran round the seat and leaned out through the window with her torch. There was a stretch of turf outside and a man lying there with on arm over his breast and the other flung out wide upon the grass. The beam showed her Francis Colesborough's face, and she thought that he was dead. She felt cold, and stiff, and a little sick. She remembered the pistol that had been in Sylvia's hand.

She turned round and laid the torch on the arm of the seat. The pistol—she must find the pistol. Someone was coming—there had been a pistol in Sylvia's hand—she must find it—someone was calling her—someone was coming.

She held on to the seat because her knees were shaking, and stooped down to grope in the dry twigs and withered leaves. Her hand touched the pistol and found it, still warm from Sylvia's hand. This endless, dragged-out time had been only a moment, then. She stood up with the pistol in her hand and began to wipe it with the hem of her dress.

Algy had never had the slightest intention of allowing Gay to go blinding off alone into dark, unknown grounds with the fairly obvious intention of meeting an anonymous blackmailer. She had, naturally, not announced this as her reason for coming down here in the middle of the night, but it seemed perfectly clear to him that it was what she meant to do, and the minute she mentioned Colebrook, and he guessed that their destination was Cole Lester, he guessed too that it was probably Sylvia Colesborough who was being blackmailed and not Gay Hardwicke. He felt a queer rage against Gay for getting herself mixed up with what was probably a piece of folly and no business of hers.

As he followed Gay at a safe distance up the drive, his rage turned back upon himself, because of all things in the world he could least afford to mix himself up with any new scandal. He was a fool to have come, and a complete fool to have pledged himself not to ask any questions. He ought to have insisted on asking them. He ought at the very start to have said "Nothing doing" and hung up his receiver. He ought . . . In his heart of hearts he knew perfectly well that he would have taken Gay to Timbuctoo rather than let her run stupid risks without him.

He came to the end of the drive, and realized that he had lost her. What had he to do now? Follow the plan he had made and hope for the best. He wished her away—anywhere but here—in London—out of this business. It weighed darkly on his mind, darkly on them both. He went on. . . .

As the sound of the shot rang out and died away, he began to run. A bird went up, startled, with a rush of wings. His torch was in his hand. When he came to the yew walk he switched it on and saw the dark mouth gaping. And then from the far end he caught the flash of another torch. He plunged into the tunnel and ran along it. He was more afraid than he had even been in his life before. There was a nightmare sense of weight upon his feet and upon his heart

He came to the seat, and the full beam of his torch shone across it and showed him Gay standing there with a pistol in one hand and a fold of her skirt in the other.

What he felt was not to be put into words—a blinding anger, a cold fear. What was she doing with the pistol—Gay—what had she done? He said her name, and she threw the pistol on the seat and came running to him helter-skelter like a child. She was in his arms and he was holding her before there was time for either of them to think or draw breath He felt her strain against him, shuddering. All that had resisted her broke in him and dissolved. He said quick and low,

"What is it? Gay — darling — what is it?"

And Gay said "He's dead! Oh, I think he's dead!"

"Who?"

"Francis."

"Where?"

"Outside—on the grass."

"Did you come to meet him? Was he blackmailing you?"

She put her hand against his chest and pushed him away.

"I can't breathe Oh, no — it couldn't have been Francis — it couldn't!"

"Then why did you shoot him?"

"I didn't! Oh, Algy, I didn't!"

He released her.

"Where is he? Show me!"

They leaned together against the hedge and over the green sill of the window that was cut in it. In the light of Algy's torch Francis Colesborough lay dreadfully still

"How does one get out there?" Algy's tone was almost matter-of-fact.

Gay looked away. Francis was dead She was quite sure that Francis was dead She pointed to the left and said in a small, faint voice,

"There's a way out along there."

There was, in fact, a way out at either end of the cross-piece. She didn't know why she had pointed to the left, but when he had run that way she thought perhaps it was because Sylvia had been standing on the right. He hadn't seen Sylvia yet.

She picked up her own torch from the arm of the seat and flashed it around. There wasn't anyone there.

Algy's voice called to her through the window, "Gay—come here," and when she came he leaned in across the sill and said,

"He's dead. Who shot him?"

She said nothing.

"Gay—if you did it, tell me. I'll get you away. Only for God's sake tell me!"

"I didn't! Algy, I didn't!"

"What were you doing with the pistol?"

"I picked it up. I was wiping it"

"Why? For God's sake, why?"

She burst into tears "I can't tell you. What are we going to do? Algy, what are we going to do?"

He said, "I can get you away We'd better chance it Wipe that pistol again Take hold of it with your dress. Don't leave any fingerprints Then run along and meet me at the end of the hedge. If we can get to the car we can get clear."

Gay said, "You go. I can't." But what she really meant was, "If I go, that will put it on Sylvia. I can't leave Sylvia"

"Gay, if you did it—"

She stamped her foot

"I didn't! I tell you I didn't!"

"Then we'd better go up to the house and get help."

* * *

They did not need to go up to the house, for the house was roused. From the end of the lawn they could see lighted windows, black figures crossing them, lights moving, lights coming nearer.

"Algy, what are we going to say?"

"You came down to see Sylvia I drove you We heard the shot We found him dead. Stick to it"

The lights came on. The butler arrived panting—a fat man, his round face glistening with sweat in the light of a large electric lamp Gay remembered him, soft-voiced and decorous.

He panted out, "What are you doing here? What's up? What's happened? Her ladyship—"

"Your master's dead," said Algy. "He's been shot. You'll have to send for the police. And a doctor My name is Somers, and this lady is Miss Hardwicke, Lady Colesborough's cousin We were coming down here to see her We heard the shot, and found Sir Francis lying on the grass beyond the yew hedge over there. I don't think there's any doubt about his being dead. We don't know who shot him. How many men have you got here?"

"There's two footmen, sir, and myself, and two men at the garage, and two gardeners who live on the place."

"Well, you'd better round them up. Someone must stay by the body and see it isn't touched. And put a man on any way into this tunnel place, because he was shot from there. The weapon's lying on the seat by the window. Hurry all you can. Miss Hardwicke will go to Lady Colesborough. I'll come with you if you like, but the police ought to be sent for at once. By the way, what's your name?"

"Sturrock, sir. Perhaps you'll get on the telephone, sir. I'd best take charge out here."

"Where is Lady Colesborough? Miss Hardwicke had better tell her."

Gay caught her breath.

Sturrock said, still panting, "Her ladyship knows, sir. She came in running and calling for help. She roused us all, crying out that Sir Francis was shot. And then she dropped down in a faint, and the housekeeper's looking to her, and her own maid."

"Well, we'd better be getting along" said Algy.

Sylvia was in the study. They had carried her there and laid her on the leather-covered couch. She had come out of her faint and was sobbing hysterically, with her maid, a sensible-looking middle-aged woman, trying to soothe her.

Sylvia sat up when she saw Gay, clutched her, and said, sobbing.

"Is he dead? Oh, he isn't? Oh, he can't be! Oh, send everyone away!"

The two women went Algy went. Gay heard him ask where there was another telephone, and then something about the butler's pantry The door was shut.

Sylvia stopped crying and said, "Is Francis dead?"

"I think so."

"He shot him!" said Sylvia in a quick, excited voice. "Oh, Gay, it was dreadful! They were quarreling and he shot him!"

"Sylly—who?"

"Mr. Zero," said Sylvia with a sob.

"But you had the pistol in your hand—you had it."

"Sylvia looked at her with wide, frightened eyes.

"I picked it up."

"But Francis was outside—the other side of the hedge. Where was this Zero man?"

"He was outside too."

"Then how did you get the pistol?"

Sylvia swayed as if she was going to faint again.

She let go of Gay and said in a failing voice, "I picked it up."

Gay caught her by the arm.

"Sylly, pull yourself together. You can't faint now—there isn't time. Algy is telephoning to the police. You've got to tell me what happened You've got to make up your mind what you're going to say. They'll ask hundreds of questions. Tell me what happened—quickly, before anyone comes."

Sylvia drew a long breath.

"I told you — I had to meet him—"

"This blackmailing Zero man?"

"Yes—I told you. I took the letters he wanted — out of the safe."

"Go on"

"I wrapped them up in an old silk handkerchief. It was a very ugly one—"

"It doesn't matter about the handkerchief. Go on."

"It does, because that's why I couldn't find them — after I'd dropped them, I mean It was a dark green handkerchief with a sort of brown check on it."

Gay thought, "It's exactly like a nightmare. Francis has been murdered, and we're talking about the color of an old handkerchief."

She said, "Tell me what happened—tell me what happened."

Sylvia leaned back into the corner of the crimson leather couch, and said with a rush of words

"Francis was here. I don't know how he knew I had gone out. I opened the parlor door—"

"You left the light on"

Native of Germany Reviews Hitler's Actions, Tells of Intentions.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

April 19.

ALONG my way to town, I have often felt the charm of a little white country church on a hillside, across the valley. There it stands, nestled against the hillside forest. Its foundation is native rock, its spire points God-ward in clear, sharp outline against the trees. To look at it is to feel a lift of spirit.

Last Sunday I took my family there. A car was parked on the southern side and I saw a man looking intently at some headstones in the little cemetery beyond. He walked over to a new-made grave and stood reverently. Perhaps a friend was buried there. It seemed to me a perfect place to lay ones friends to rest.

A man greeted me and I remarked, "What a picturesque, romantic little church this is."

He smiled. "Many people feel that way. Every once in a while some couple, entire strangers to the place, will stop in off the highway to get married here. They see the church, sometimes for a long while, from the other road—and when they want the knot tied so it won't slip, here they come, hunt up the preacher, deck the church with flowers—"

"And make this lovely scene a part of their whole lives," I finished. His face lighted. "That's it!"

We went inside. Other people came and shortly the church was full. It was Easter Sunday and one fourth of the congregation sang in the choir. It was a lovely, inspiring anthem. All through the service I felt the presence of sincere hearts, and souls in deep communion with their God.

I still look across the valley at the little church, but now it has, for me, a still different and warmer meaning.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25¢ package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

NOTES on things to come: Ready for production in the modern Hollywood manner is "Private Lives," the rollicking Noel Coward comedy that amused both London and Keokuk audiences no less than eight years ago. Fernand Gravet, the lad who just finished slapping Carol Lombard about in "Fools for Scandal," will take the part of another young husband who divorces his wife . . . only to fall in love with her again. He's the lad who is supposed to be the movies' double for the Prince of Wales. He made his screen debut in the "King and the Chorus Girl," remember? Who will take the part of the divorced wife that brought Gertrude Lawrence international acclaim on the stage, remains a mystery.

Brady Gets Break.

"In Old Chicago" will be held over through Thursday at the Ohio and may remain longer, according to Manager Frank Harpster. The opening date of "Test Pilot," the Clark Gable-Myrna Loy-Spencer Tracy picture, will depend upon the closing date of the Chicago fire film. The current flicker drama is drawing good attendance, partially because of the cast and certainly because everyone is familiar with the story of how Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern which started the great fire that wiped out Chicago in 1867. Alice Brady, given to effervescent roles, gets her first real dramatic break in years and delivers a fine portrayal as Mrs. O'Leary, the stout-hearted Irish-American who came to Chicago as a washwoman for the "fancy ladies," and lived to see one of her sons mayor of a great city. Don Ameche, Tyrone Power and Alice Faye make up the cast.

Prize For Mary.

For the first time in good Hollywood memories a title for a motion picture was furnished by the leading lady, when pearl-blond Mary Carlisle supplied the name for "Tip-Off Girls," the drama of highway racketeers who use beautiful girls to trap their victims. Miss Carlisle, who plays the leading feminine role opposite Lloyd Nolan, won a studio prize for the most desirable name submitted for the picture. Hi-jacking, which exacted a tribute of millions from the nation in stolen merchandise, is the theme of the picture which is current at the Madison. Complications arise when a G-man on the trail of the racketeers finds that the secretary of one is the only girl in the world. Roscoe Karns may not look impressive but he does a nice bit of work as a government man on the case.

Cure For the Bashful.

Eleanor Powell, the girl who took up dancing to cure bashfulness, and James Stewart, the tall, lanky lad who made a hit with his bashful manner, co-star in "Born to Dance," musical extravaganza continued through tomorrow at the Majestic. High spot in the show is when Miss Powell leads a 75-piece band with taps Frances Langford supplies the feminine crooning for the show,

Critic Turns Actress.

For a good many years, Louella Parsons of Hollywood has been taking cracks at movie stars from her position as critic. With the showing of "Hollywood Hotel" at the Ritz theater today and tomorrow, the tables are turned. In her jump from typewriter through radio to movie screen, Louella emerges on the screen as mistress of ceremonies introducing (as she does on the radio program of the same name) the movie great and near great. Dick Powell is No. 1 man of the musical comedy. Some of the other stars introduced by Louella are the Lane sisters, Rosemary and Lola, Marion Davies, Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, and a host of the better known citizens of Hollywood. Also on the bill is the Jones Family in "Off To The Races."

"A sensible man judges of present by past events."—Sophocles.

Congress may adjourn by June 1 but there's no likelihood of politics having even a recess.

It's hard for most people to understand why gold has any particular value if there is no use for it.

Going Ahead With Plans.

OFFICIALS of a large American corporation have just decided to go ahead with the construction of a million-dollar plant that they have long planned and needed. Some months ago they obtained funds for the project through issuance of new common stock. Then they became cautious.

"Mounting uncertainties on the business horizon delayed the decision to undertake a project of this size," explains the president of the company. But after a period of waiting and marking time they have come to the conclusion that they might as well build. Their business needs the new plant. They have the money for it. They believe that there will be continued demand for their product.

It looks as if this concern, and several others that have acted in the same confident way during the last few months, have hit upon as good a way as any to dispel the "mounting uncertainties on the business horizon."

Enlarging Library Usefulness.

DECISION to enlarge on the purposes of the John Sherman room at Mansfield's public library, to the extent of making it a repository for local historical documents, merits public approval and co-operation.

In the rush of things, there is danger of losing sight of the importance of preserving early records of interest and value, and of assembling these in some conveniently accessible place for future reference.

While some phases of early-day Mansfield have been recorded in the several city and county histories issued within the past fifty years, there has been no systematic effort to carry this into the developments of successive decades, nor to perpetuate the memory of various individuals who have made notable contribution to community upbuilding.

A fault in connection with local histories is that their publication cost is usually met by persons whose biographical sketches appear therein—which results in omission of reference to some of the people who deserve recognition.

Old newspapers, while serving their purpose for a time, lack the permanency in which the record of Mansfield and its environs should eventually be compiled in a complete and readable way. The public library is a natural focal point for such an accomplishment.

Treaties Not Enough.

A BILL recently proposed in congress calls for an international conference, led by the United States, to re-examine and restate international law concerning "murder of women and children in war." It would also stigmatize the practice of bombing civilians "as beyond the pale of even the most rudimentary civilization."

The American Institute of Public Opinion finds that 91 per cent of the American people agree that civilians should not be bombed during war and that 61 per cent favor an international conference to deal with this matter.

There have been international laws or treaties before this seeking to "humanize" war, to make rules for it which would preserve certain decencies even in the height of conflict. In spite of these efforts, the wars now going on have included worse horrors than ever before, worse treatment of non-combatants and more wanton destruction of the physical expressions of culture and civilizations, such as churches, universities and hospitals.

Safety Through Effort.

SAFETY contests for drivers of delivery vans and trucks produce good results. A city safety council reports that during February of this year the drivers of 76 companies had no accidents at all. In February 1937 the 76 companies reported 60 accidents.

Several factors are combined in such an achievement. Drivers must be intelligent and careful. The trucks and vans they operate must be kept in good repair. Traffic regulations in the area where their business lies must be sensible to begin with, honestly supported by drivers and honestly enforced by police. With these different elements in force, weather becomes a minor influence, readily overcome, and safe operation is the rule.

Mishandled Coal Supply.

REPORT of the international labor office on the world coal industry is reassuring as to the amount of coal available in the world. The coal reserves, including both anthracite and bituminous, would last 37 centuries at the present rate of extraction.

There is a wide variation in production rates, with miners in the United States getting out 18 tons to one in Russia. If Russia's daily production per miner never increases its coal should last 37,478 years. But if Russia becomes truly industrialized and its workers as efficient as ours, its coal will not last long.

The United States has the highest extraction rate of all the coal producing countries, yet has coal enough for 3,686 years.

Great Britain is in the most precarious position with a reserve of 200,000,000,000 metric tons, enough to last only 868 years at the present rate.

The serious problem of coal, however, is not the amount in existence, but the profitable production and use of this important natural resource.

Overheard suggestion: "Make no small plans—make BIG plans. Our children will make plans that will stagger our imagination."

At least for voting purposes, all Americans are created equal—the only advantage being with the repeaters.

Another advantage about "laying up treasures in heaven" is that they're non-taxable.

Statement To American Workers

Editor's Note: B. C. Forbes, economist and experienced analyst of national affairs, has written the following statement, addressed chiefly to workers of the nation. It contains so much of sound sense that it deserves thoughtful reading by every worker who is interested in making an individual contribution to better conditions.

This is written mainly for workers.

If you have a job, you are helping the country. You are aiding to increase the nation's wealth, the nation's business. You are a consumer, paying your own way. Also, you help to finance the government through the payment of taxes on practically everything you eat, wear, use.

You are a national asset.

If you are on relief, whether home relief or work relief, you are in the unhappy position of having to be supported by wage-earners and others not on relief. The money you get comes from them, from taxes.

Not one man in twenty would prefer relief to an honest-to-goodness job.

What America needs more than anything else is more jobs.

How can more jobs be created?

More jobs would be and could be created if the federal government co-operated with employers, big and little, if owners of business had more faith in the fairness of Washington.

Have you any idea of how much of the money earned by corporations, companies, firms, etc., is seized by tax collectors, money which, if not so seized, would be available for increasing wages, increasing work forces, increasing plants, increasing dividends to stock owners, or other constructive purposes?

Here are some examples:

The Bell System contributed $525 for every worker.

Consolidated Edison's taxes in 1937 were equivalent to $1,176 for each employe.

General Motors' share last year averaged $440 for each person on its payroll. General Electric's taxes equaled $310 per employe.

Bethlehem Steel figures that, at the average rate of earnings per employe last year, the taxes they paid were equivalent to full-time employment throughout the year for 11,898 employes.

You can see how difficult it is for any business to hand over so much money to tax eaters and, at the same time, pay decent wages or earn reasonable dividends.

The worst of it is that the latest plans proposed by President Roosevelt mean that still more money will be taken by tax leviers. In other words, for each dollar a business draws in a larger part of it will be grabbed by politicians, leaving therefore a smaller share for wage earners, for owners of the company's securities, for improving or expanding the plant, for building up the enterprise. All this makes it likely that more people will have to be fed and clothed and housed by workers having jobs. It means that more burdensome taxes will make it more difficult for business to provide work and earn even meager profits.

What is needed is not more and more billions of expenditures of taxpayers' money by Washington, but a more friendly attitude by Washington towards business, towards industry, towards employment givers. President Roosevelt has it in his power to quicken the return of prosperity and employment.

The question is: Will he do it?

Congress Perturbed By Spending

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Congress is in an awful state of mind over President Roosevelt's spending requirements.

The average lawmaker, as is well known, strongly is disposed to vote federal money to be spent in his own individual bailiwick—statewide or representatorial district-wide. He has a large class of constituents who expect to benefit from such grants and will fight him on re-election day if he opposes them. Hitherto he generally has considered it the part of political wisdom to yield to the demands of this class.

However, he has also a sizable class of taxpaying constituents who, he is aware, are beginning to incline toward a policy of biting his political ear off if he indorses a program calculated to increase the burden of imposts for them to bear.

He is uncertain which class to cater to most.

NO PARTISANSHIP

There is not much partisanship involved in the problem.

Republicans are somewhat more independent of the administration to be sure, than Democratic legislators are. Still, Democrats no longer care much for White House support in their campaigns.

No further back than a few weeks ago Democrats, coming up for renominations, were worried lest they meet with Roosevelt hostility. Now they express indifference as to it. They reckon that, even if executive enmity does damage them a little, they will more than make it up by Republican aid.

* * *

ILLINOIS CITED

Recent Illinois primaries were suggestive.

The Republicans balloted negligibly.

However, anti-administrative Democrats scored noticeably against the administration's Democratic "pros."

The conclusion would seem to be that Republican primary voters deserted their own Republican aspirants in favor of Democratic anti-administrationists.

It amounts to a partisan re-alignment, of course.

ALIGNMENT IN REVERSE

Such a re-alignment has been promised for years.

But, curiously, this is a re-alignment in reverse of what one would have anticipated.

A re-alignment appeared to be impending in 1924, when many voters apparently were shifting from Republican conservatism to Democratic or Progressive liberality.

Today many Democrats are shifting to conservatism, and are trying to pick up all the erstwhile liberal votes they can get.

CONFUSED

In short, a liberal leads a conservative Democratic party.

And Republicanism, supposedly liberal, is conservative.

Thus:

President Roosevelt, nominally a conservative, is a liberal.

Vice President Garner and his coterie, nominally liberal, are conservative.

Make some sense out of that.

F. D. R. VS. GARNER

Leaderships?

We've got two:

President Roosevelt's and John N. Garner's.

It becomes more and more evident.

Garner is too old: I know that. Nevertheless, he is logical.

Roosevelt versus Garner!

It is the ideal set-up.

In 1940!—

Roosevelt? The chosen Democrat-Republican!

Garner? The chosen Republican-Democrat!

Parties split! It would be interesting.

Says Ice Cream Is Good Food Doctor Tells Its History

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

We have not nearly enough records in the history of the race of the delight which men have experienced when they first sampled a brand new invention in the culinary art. Lamb's derrestation on roast pig is the best and nearly the only one that comes to mind.

What must have been the sensation and the lifting of the heart when Catherine de Medici introduced the jaded appetites of the French court to ice cream.

Ice cream had a complicated ancestor. It was said that the Emperor Nero combined snow from the mountain passes with fresh fruit juices. Marco Polo discovered frozen milk ices in Asia and introduced them into Italy. Catherine de Medici brought them from Italy to France. Charles I of England brought over a French chef and ice cream became the favorite dish of the English court. It is said that New Yorkers first sampled the delicacy when a London confectioner opened a shop not far from the Battery in pre-Revolutionary days. Dolly Madison introduced it into the White House at a dinner.

The first manufacture of ice cream on an industrial basis was begun by Jacob Fussel in Baltimore in 1851.

Our annual production of ice cream puts a big strain this month. In 1937 the United States consumed 287,270,000 gallons of ice cream. Drug stores market nearly 30 per cent of this output.

Preferred Flavors.

I am surprised to find that about 56 per cent of American ice cream is flavored with vanilla and only 10 per cent chocolate. I would have thought that the chocolate was much higher. Strawberry flavor is next in frequency with eight per cent.

Of course, like so many articles that bring pleasure and are pleasant to the palate, ice cream was at first condemned by the kill-joys of the world. It was said to cause dyspepsia; that it chilled the stomach and stopped the process of digestion. Quite the contrary from being a harmful food, ice cream and its cousins, the ices, are very good foods. The stomach has a remarkable capacity for reducing all foods which enter it to the same temperature.

Ice cream contains calcium, phosphorus, iron and a high quality of protein, sugar and butter fat. All of these are essential for the balanced chemistry of digestion and for the proper nourishment of the body—bone, muscle and nerve.

Babies and convalescents eat it because doctors and diet experts recommend it. Millions of others eat it because it gives them quick nourishment and because they like it.

Gambling for Fun or Profit.

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—If you gamble and lose, and want your losses deducted from your income tax returns, hark to the tale of Vina Delmar, the story writer, and her husband, Eugene Delmar, also a story writer.

To begin at the beginning, the Delmars one New York's Eve went from their Hollywood home to Agua Caliente, across the Mexican border. At 1 a. m., after the New Year's whistles had blown and all that, Eugene sat down to a serious game of chemin-de-fer.

First he lost a bit. Vina was at his elbow. She kept running to the cashier to cash checks to bring him fresh funds. Then he began winning. He pulled ahead $500. And that, perhaps, was the beginning and the end of the first day. But the game went right on and Eugene went with it and when he quit, on Jan. 2, he had chalked up a loss of $1,200, which is a fair to middling loss even to a couple whose earnings some years clock up past the $50,000 mark.

But in between cashing checks for Eugene, Vina was not idle. She played roulette and she lost $300. Now arises the hitch.

How It Was Decided

THE two submitted separate income tax returns, each claiming half of the $1,500 loss. The board of tax appeals allowed a tax deduction for the $1,200 lost by Eugene but denied them the $300 lost by Vina, claiming that he had played for [illegible] but she had played only for fun.

Now why?

It is all a matter of intent. Eugene set out to show that he seriously intended to profit at the game.

"The game was a very large game," he told the board. "There were banks going up for as much as $5,000. And it was a beautiful spot for somebody who understood a little about the game, which I thought I did, to go in there and just knock out about $15,000. And I tried it, but it didn't work."

"Was the pleasure involved in it a material factor in your decision to get into the game?" he was asked.

"There was no pleasure in that kind of a chemin-der-fer game. They washed me up. I quit."

To prove that he was no greenhorn he explained that he had tried out the game in Paris one time and "spent two years in the army shooting craps." That was during the war.

"I came out of the army, a buck private, with better than $2,000. If you don't think that is something—!"

Well, the board thought it was something, plenty, in fact. He submitted in evidence the checks that he and Vina had cashed and was allowed the full $1,200 deduction.

But Vina didn't testify. Eugene merely said that "she played roulette, but very small. She is a very small gambler." The board assumed she was just frolicking around when she lost $300, and was not serious about winning.

Profit Or Fun

THE board itself was not frivolous in the matter. It has long ruled that owners of racing stables can deduct for losses if they prove they seriously intended to make money out of the game. George Widener was allowed deductions, and so was Richard Whitney.

The board is pretty hard on losers at bridge. In most states gambling is illegal, anyway, and that puts such losses in a bad light, for tax purposes. So maybe, after all, you had just as well play for fun and kiss your losses goodbye.

Timely Editorial

Perpetual Motion.

It's difficult to believe, but reports which must be presumed to be accurate say that New York state recently found it necessary to move legally to prevent citizens from investing in a stock promotion based on a perpetual motion machine.

Perpetual motion! The figment of a thousand theorists' imaginative dreams. It is as out of place in the year of our Lord, 1938, as gold bricks, side-bar buggies, handle-bar mustaches or, for that matter, alchemy and witch-doctors. But it is eloquent testimony as to how hard the race's evanescent fancies die that even in this ultra-practical day there would be found innocents who would invest their savings in a contraption which not only defies all the laws of physics, but common reasons as well and which always has been held in gentle derision by the informed.—Columbus Ditpatch.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It was to be a night of bridge. For blood. Four men in shirt sleeves gathered about a table dealing and shuffling the little spotted cards. And no women. No gossip. No endless chatter and tedious pauses between bids.

"You will have to pinch hit for me," said Charles, who is a doctor. "But you will have a good time. Dick Maney, Morton Downey and Conrad Miller will be there. At my house. I asked them to come and now I have to go and take out a jeweler's appendix. You'll find the key in the mail box. But the others will probably be there. Move right in. Help yourself. Everything you want will be in the ice box and on the kitchen table."

And so I cancelled an appointment to meet C. L. Martin, the writer, at the library, where we were ging to look up a lot of data on early New York murders.

* * *

AND I went up to Charles' house, about 8:30. I wanted to see Dick Maney, who is a poet and a publicist, and I wanted to see Morton Downey, who is Irish and a singer. Maney and I have a half-date to go to New Orleans on a banana boat soon, and it would be good to discuss it with him.

But when I got there a cheery fellow whom I had never seen met me at the door. "My name's Green," he explained. "Morton Downey couldn't get here and I'm taking his place. Hope you don't mind."

Green was a tall, very lanky fellow and a good companion. And in a few minutes, since the other's hadn't come, we went back into the kitchen and got out the ice and mixed a few cool glasses of water, to ease our thirst.

As the ice water sank home and we began to feel like old friends, the door bell jangled, and in walked another lad neither of us had ever seen.

"Say," he said, "I'm taking Dick Maney's place, if it's okay with you. He got a wire from Guthrie McClintic to meet him in Philly, and he just can't get here. Something about a new show. Hope you chaps don't mind too much."

"Well, that's fine," cried Green. "You must be thirsty after your long journey. Come into the kitchen where the hydrants are."

HIS name, I forgot to mention, was Bill Teller, and that's what he was, a teller at a downtown bank, and by the time Bill had refreshed himself at the hydrant somebody was clamoring at the door and it was our fourth at bridge.

And of course, as you've guessed, it wasn't Conrad Miller at all. It was his brother-in-law, a blond, good-natured Swede. Because Conrad had a sore throat and didn't want to risk pneumonia. And rather than break up the game, he sent his brother-in-law.

Well, there we were, four guys who had never seen one another, sitting down to a table in a house in Manhattan. In shirt sleeves. And no women. Just as planned. I will say here that the Swede won, although I had good cards and should have walked off with the chicken. Come to think of it, I did get some of the chicken. It was cold and fried. We found it in the doctor's ice box.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

JUST where shall we land? That is the question in the minds of many men today, as a new inflation is begun.

Virtually every country—except the Soviet Union—has the same problem today, and the Soviet Union has a generally lower standard of living than would be accepted here.

And virtually every country, no matter its form of government, seems headed in the same direction. A New York financial writer believes the same course would be followed here even if the Republicans or the anti-New Deal Democrats, or the Socialists or the Communists were in power. Perhaps it is not so much the easiest way, as the only way at the moment unless we desire to make vast social changes. And each people seems to fear that.

Each government now has managed currency, and each is trying to buck the natural laws of economics. And what will occur in the end? The whole thing will blow up—and we shall see a more violent social upheaval than if we had taken the hard, unpopular road in the beginning. At least, that is what political economists are saying. Only time will tell now.

UPHEAVAL NOT WAR.

The peculiar part of it all is that "war correspondents" consistently write of coming wars, when the real danger seems to be from internal explosions.

There is less indication of war among nations today than in some time. They already have begun to feel the effects of their war spending.

Observe the tendency to make treaties. Treaties mean credits or exchange of goods. We are more likely to see a British-French-German-Italian pact than a war involving those countries. Germany already complains of feeling hurt upon not being included in rumors of a French-Italian pact!

The Anglo-Italian pact is a forerunner of a new trend.

No, it is not war against which nations are bulwarking themselves now. It is social and political upheaval. The nations that shout the loudest acclaim for a hero may prove to be the most volatile. That would let the United States out. The tirade against President Roosevelt seldom has been equalled in any country. His opponents have gone a long way.

REPAYMENT.

Invasion of one country by another usually reacts in a serious manner in the modern economic world.

Unquestionably Italy has suffered severely through its invasion of Ethiopia—and no one can say what its venture in Spain will cost. No one ever has come out of Spain whole. That venture, into which Nazi Germany joined, furthermore has not been popular in Italy. It would be strange if, undertaken on the ground that the Leftists must be prevented from "encroaching," the venture finally would engender a Leftist movement in Italy. Probably Mussolini and Hitler have not read the life of Napoleon, who not only invaded, but created his own currency.

As for Japan's invasion of China—why, it may set Japan back a hundred years, and incidentally impoverish terribly two good customers of the United States.

F. D. R.

An analysis of the New Deal and President Roosevelt has been appearing in the Wall Street Journal. It is written by Bernard Kilgore, Washington observer.

He says that Mr. Roosevelt's strength in his first term lay in his ability to grasp and express the hopes and aspirations of the people. But, in the second term, he has been unwilling or unable "to resolve the inevitable conflicts" and proceed with the economic and social reforms.

IT WILL REACH SOME.

The new spending will reach some. It will greatly lift the buying power of many. Both sides are agreed on that.

But, as with all inflationary projects, as buying power rises, costs are increased, so that real wages may become lower than ever.

Of course, many folk will be receiving wages who are not receiving any now. That will prevent starvation. That is a must.

But misery will continue. Disparity will be as sharp as ever. Fundamentals will not have been reached. When men receive an equal share in the results of their labor then we shall have a really stable buying power, and stable industry. That means much more comprehensive economic and social reforms than have been undertaken, and would arouse even greater opposition from those who oppose "spending." Thus they will take "spending" in preference—as in other countries. And the piper will be paid later.

MEASLES TOLL SOARS, 543 ILL SINCE APRIL 1

Disease Continues Unchecked, 1,000 Cases Reported in County in 2 Months.

The spread of measles in Richland county continued unchecked today as health authorities said 248 new cases of the disease were reported in the past week to bring the total to 543 since April 1.

Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, said the number of cases reported so far this month was nearly 100 more than the total for the entire month of March when 453 cases were listed. He added that the new cases brings the total to 1,264 since Jan. 1, or one-third more than the total number reported for the entire year of 1932, when the last measles outbreak struck the city and state.

285 Cases in City.

Of the new cases, 120 were in the city to bring the month's total to 285 and 128 were in various parts of the county to raise that total to 258 since April 1. More than 800 cases have been reported in the city since Jan. 1, and 440 from other parts of the county, Dr. Rehder said.

The commissioner warned of the dangers of complications resulting in pneumonia and pointed out that children's diseases were unusually prevalent at this time of the year. He said the United States Public Health Service reported more than 41,000 cases of measles throughout the nation during the past week, an increase of 3,000 over the previous week.

CITY SUED AGAIN IN AUTO DEATH

Cincinnati Man, Kin of Woman Killed in 1936, Asks $10,590 Damages.

With the filing of a $10,590 damage suit in common pleas court, the city of Mansfield today had been made defendant in damage actions totaling $35,590 as the result of an automobile accident nearly two years ago on Lexington avenue.

Filed by William Willet of Cincinnati, the latest action seeks damages for injuries suffered by the plaintiff on June 27, 1936, in an accident in which his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Julia Willet, was killed.

A previous petition, filed eight weeks ago by William Willet, jr., also of Cincinnati, asks $25,000 damages for Mrs. Willet's death.

Both petitions accuse the city of negligence, contending that a deep rut in Lexington avenue near the city limits caused the car in which the plaintiffs were riding to swerve across the street and upset in a ditch.

The plaintiffs in both suits are represented by Atty. William F. Black, Mansfield, and H. C. Beckner of Cincinnati.

30 TO COMPETE

Senior High to Send Group to Kent for Scholarship Test.

Thirty students from Mansfield High school will go to Kent State university Saturday, May 7, to take part in the annual district state scholarship contest.

The competition is sponsored by the State Department of Education and is expected to attract between 1,800 and 2,000 students from this part of the state.

Students who will represent the school will be selected in an elimination test to be given Friday afternoon in which any pupil is eligible to compete. Already 200 students have signed to take the test, according to J. C. Stout, chairman of the test at the school.

The elimination as well as the state tests, will cover 11 different subjects, biology, chemistry, general science, physics, 1st year algebra, American history, World history, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th year English, first and second year Latin and first and second year French.

Building permits for two new homes with an estimated valuation of $13,500 were issued at city hall yesterday.

The construction licenses went to E. L. Myers, Shepard road for the erection of a $6,500 brick residence, and Edward Schmidt, 486 Stewart lane, for the construction of a $7,000 two-story brick home. J. E. Sonner, 40 Henry street, was issued a permit for the construction of a garage at an estimated cost of $200, and Mrs. Bernice Fry, 528 Springmill street, for a residence addition to cost $27.

America's Three 'Czars' Rule Their Three Industries By Consent

Radio Calls Newsman to Help Broadcasting With Reforms.

(By Associated Press)

Radio, youngest of the amusement industries fearing stricter regulation unless it makes its own reforms, has called in Mark Foster Ethridge, 41-year-old newspaper executive, to straighten out its troubles.

Ethridge takes over the job at a time when a resolution to investigate radio is pending in the senate and Mae West's famous Adam and Eve broadcast is still fresh in the minds of listeners.

The new president of the National Association of Broadcasters says the job is only temporary, that he'll "never be anything but a newspaper man." Meantime, he's continuing as general manager of two Louisville newspapers and working without salary as radio's boss.

He dislikes being described as czar of the radio industry, says he has no "arbitrary powers."

On his desk are some 20 pencils. He doodles constantly. Favorite design is a rectangle with corners connected by crosslines. He says "radio industry" and writes it again and again on a pad.

His hair is graying and thinning, and he complains of being "too fat to have my picture taken." He is of medium height, speaks softly, dresses conservatively.

As a radio listener, Ethridge says he's just "average." He likes to dial in comic and dramatic skits, symphony orchestra, news broadcasts.

Hays of Films Works to Prevent Censorship From Outside.

(By Associated Press)

Film Czar Will Hays works a 10-hour day, takes no vacations, doesn't drink or smoke.

Maybe that's why he's survived 16 turbulent years as head of filmdom's trade association, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Hays' last boss was Warren G. Harding, who made him postmaster general. As chairman of the Republican national committee, Hays steered the party to a landslide victory in 1920.

When the film industry was threatened with a national censorship because of numerous scandals, its leaders persuaded Hays to resign from the cabinet and become the movies' strong man. Hays then imposed self-censorship to meet the threat of outside censorship.

His censorship policy hasn't pleased everyone. When Catholic organizations thought he was too lax, they formed the Legion of Decency to express approval of some films, put others on a blacklist.

On Hays' $150,000-a-year job, censorship isn't the only worry. He's forever dashing from Hollywood to New York to London to Washington to improvise films, calm association members—leaders of 27 film companies — and raise the level of public taste.

Will Hays

Horseback riding is his only diversion. He has a ranch near Hollywood, prefers horses that buck and kick.

Baseball's Judge Landis a Stern Arbiter of Game's Laxities.

(By Associated Press)

Baseball's Kenesaw Mountain Landis is the original American "czar."

Gruff, cussing, stern when he meets dishonesty, the 71-year-old ex-judge has been handing down decisions for 18 years. There are no appeals.

He was named high commissioner of the game in 1919 after the Chicago - Cincinnati world series scandal. Then a federal judge in Illinois, he was sought by club owners to restore the public's confidence in the game.

He did it, making decisions like these:

Barred eight Chicago players after the 1919 episode.

Fined Babe Ruth his entire world series money for participating in a barnstorming trip.

Recently cracked down on the St. Louis Cardinals for operating a "farm system" illegally.

Landis sometimes found his job tough. Outstanding example was his feud with Ban Johnson, former president of the American league. In 1931 a legal battle to break his dictatorship failed. He came out of another battle with an increased salary. He now gets $65,000 a year.

Landis, who once fined Stand-

Judge Landis.

ard Oil of Indiana over $29,000,000, was a stern judge, too.

And although associates say he really is soft-hearted, he's a tough assignment for reporters. He'll discuss golf, fishing or other subjects—anything but baseball. Now 71, he's still spry.

HOLDS CLINIC FOR EMPLOYERS

C. of C. Outlines Obligations Under Unemployment Act at Session Tonight.

Employers' obligations under the Ohio unemployment compensation law will be outlined at a clinic for business and industrial representatives of the Mansfield district tonight in the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms.

The clinic, sponsored by the Mansfield chamber, in co-operation with the Ohio Chamber of Commerce Social Security service, will "explain to employers just what their obligations are under the new law," Paul W. Williams, secretary-manager of the C. of C. said.

Speakers representing the Social Security service of the Ohio chamber at the clinic will be Arch D. Schultz of Columbus, director of research; Paul J. Daugherty, analyst, and C. E. Hummel, Pittsburgh, Social Security service accountant for Westinghouse.

The principal discussion will be given over to computing "average weekly wages" for the purposes of accumulating a "waiting period" during partial unemployment, Williams explained.

"There are hundreds of employers in the Mansfield district who are unaware of their obligations under the unemployment program and the clinic was arranged to clarify the points in question," Williams said. All employers in Mansfield and surrounding towns are invited to the session."

The meeting will open at 7:30 p. m. in the C. of C. headquarters in the Farmers bank building.

MANSFIELDERS CARRY OFF $250 PRIZE IN U. S. KITCHEN CONTEST

Mr. and Mrs. Russell B. Gray, 481 Forest avenue, invested in a bench saw, a little lumber and paint, and today they are the winners of $250 in cash for the second prize in a national contest conducted by Better Homes and Gardens for better kitchens.

The Grays decided to enter the contest after they had converted their old fashioned kitchen into one of those that you see pictured in magazines. They took pictures before starting work on it and when it was finished and these will appear in next month's issue of Better Homes and Gardens.

The original kitchen was much too big, lighting was inadequate, the sink was the old fashioned kind with exposed plumbing pipes and there were no built-in features

But the question of finances was even more important than a color scheme, so the Grays decided to do it all themselves, except the plastering. They drew up plans for exactly the kind of a kitchen they wanted, a long U-shaped room, with built-in cabinets and continuous features on three sides, extending from the refrigerator on the right to the range on the left.

Then they divided the big room, making a separate dining room, added a small addition and made the kitchen. All of the work top cabinets, the high cupboards and the kitchen planning desk were made in the basement of the Gray home with a bench saw which they purchased for their remodeling work.

The kitchen has all of the trick built-in gadgets of which women dream and which make for efficiency and convenience.

The color scheme is all white, with vermillion red, critic yellow and black for contrast, while the floor covering is marbleized red with an inlay of white feature strips six inches from the wall. Final touches of cheeriness are the electric clock and radio mounted above the planning table.

There are a number of classes in the annual national contest and the Mansfield couple entered in the remodeled kitchen division, carrying off second price. A full list of prize winners will be found in the May issue of the magazine.

OFFERED AGAIN

Old Plant Property to Go on Auction Block May 21.

The old Browning Engineering company property in Mansfield, which failed to attract bidders at sheriff's sale April 9, will be offered again May 21 at a $6,400 reduction in appraisement, according to Atty. Marshall C. Moore, special assistant prosecutor.

The property will be sold on a $14,600 delinquent tax foreclosure judgment obtained by County Treasurer John E. Kolb against S. H. Squire, state superintendent of banks in charge of liquidation of the Union Trust company, Cleveland. The bank owned the land when liquidation of the institution was ordered.

Comprising three tracts along the Erie railroad in the northern section of the city, the property was first appraised at $15,400. The valuation was reduced to $9,000, however, when the land failed to sell.

Angalin escaped from the Mt. Vernon honor camp on July 22, 1936 and was apprehended by Cincinnati authorities. Maloy was taken into custody upon his release from the Tennessee state prison Monday. He escaped from the Grafton honor camp Sept. 12, 1930.

2 FROM COUNTY GIVEN PAROLES

Richland Convicts Among 64 Winning Release from Ohio Pen.

Two Richland convicts were among the 64 at the Ohio penitentiary to be granted paroles by the Ohio board of parole, United Press dispatches from Columbus said today. The board granted 13 conditional releases and restored paroles to two other prisoners.

The Richland county prisoners are Lester Cook and George Love. Cook, who is serving a one to 20 year sentence for shooting to wound, will be released June 14, to go to Tennessee. He was sentenced Nov. 16, 1934. Love will go to West Virginia after June 20. He was sentenced Sept. 6, 1935, for grand larceny and was serving a one to seven year sentence.

CINCINNATI — (U.P.) — A jinx which has pursued the Cincinnati Reds on opening day since 1932 to day tightened its grip on the club

The Reds dropped their sixth consecutive opening day contest here yesterday when they were beaten by the Chicago Cubs 8 to 7. A crowd of 34,148 fans saws the contest. It was the fourth largest inaugural day gathering in Cincinnati baseball history

Manager Bill McKechnie made a last-minute switch in his pitching plans and sent Gene Schott to the hill in the place of Lee Grissom the scheduled starter

The switch was unfortunate as Schott was belted for eight hits and four runs in five and one-third innings. Ray (Peaches) Davis and Al Hollingsworth shared the remainder of the pitching burden Davis was charged with the loss

Clay Bryant was the starting Chicago hurler but was knocked from the box in the fourth round Charley Root and Bob Logan finished. Root was credited with the triumph

Philly Incident Started Dean On Way

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—On August 26, 1937, at Philadelphia, Dizzy Dean made two startling pitches that ended his chances of remaining a member of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The fatal tosses were the first two thrown by Dean in the opening inning of a game with the Phillies. The first pitch hit the top of the screen back of home plate and the second barely missed the press box.

If you will turn back to the papers of the following morning you will read that Dean pitched to only one batter in that game, and that night was shipped off to St. Louis on the grounds that his arm had gone bad again.

But his arm wasn't quite that bad. Four days before he had pitched well to defeat the Pirates 9 to 7. Dizzy didn't want to pitch against the Phillies that day. As he wasn't speaking to Manager Frankie Frisch—hadn't been speaking to him in weeks, in fact—his wishes were conveyed to the manager through Coach Mike Gonzales. But Frisch was adamant. So Dizzy, with a final "well, he wants me to pitch anyway, eh!" walked out to the hill and let fly.

This rather bitter little scene in Philadelphia was mild in comparison, however, to the storm that broke out in the St. Louis clubhouse a week or so later when the Cardinals came in off the road.

With the team assembled, Frisch strode in and said: "No matter what you might have heard to the contrary, I will be the manager of this team in 1938. Furthermore, I have heard reports that some of you players think I am jealous of you—envious of the money you make. That's a lie. I want all of you to make all the money you can."

At this point Dizzy cut in. "You must be talking about me, Frank."

"I'm not saying who I'm talking about," Frisch bellowed, "but if the shoe fits you, wear it."

Dean then rose and launched one of the finest, all-around, free-style, no-words-barred oral attacks any manager ever listened to. For a good five minutes he raked Frisch over the coals, using all the standard forms of address for such an occasion and a great many home-grown phrases. Dizzy finished with the remark that he knew three players on the club who knew more baseball in five minutes than Frisch would know in a lifetime, and that one of them should be managing the club.

"Never mind that," Frisch barked, "I'll be running it in 1938."

"And doing a blankety-blank job, too," Dean roared back.

That same day Dean was paid off for the remainder of the season and told to go home.
